Persian Gulf U.S. minefield?

Times News Services

The Carter administration is stepping up preparations to mine or blockade the Persian Gulf in case the president wants to exercise either option, government sources said Sunday night.

Beyond those assessments, the navy is sifting through its files of active and retired officers in a crash effort to find specialists in the tricky art of laying mines in distant waters like the Persian Gulf.

The navy already has drafted letters asking such retired specialists to return to active duty on a limited basis. Without a declaration of a national emergency, such requests must be by invitation rather than call-up orders.

Either mining the sea lanes of the Persian Gulf or sealing up that waterway by a blockade would cripple Iran's economy. The gulf is the main lifeline for food and other supplies going into Iran, as well as the exit passage for Iranian oil, the country's main source of wealth.

From a diplomatic standpoint, either mining or blockading the gulf would carry the risk of the Iranian militants hurting or killing the 50 American hostages held at gunpoint in Tehran.

From a military standpoint, there are also risks. But Carter could take them if diplomacy fails and other economic pressures fail.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said as much Sunday on Issues and Answers, (ABC-TV).

Asked about the prospects for a blockade, Brown said, "Specifically, we cannot rule out the options of cutting off Iranian imports by one means or another," though he added the pressures by the international community were "much preferable."

Under one plan, the president would set a deadline for the release of the hostages after the mines were laid in

Gold record topped again

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices jumped more than $37 an ounce to a record level in London today following sharp rises during the weekend in the Far East. The U.S. dollar was mixed.

Gold was fixed at $660 U.S. an ounce ($765 Canadian) in London this morning. The previous European trading high was $645 in Zurich on Jan. 3.

Last Friday, gold closed at $622.50 in London and $621.50 In Zurich.

The new surge to record heights followed hectic weekend trading in the Far East. Gold hit an all-time peak of $674.54 in Hong Kong on Saturday, topping its previous high of $673.16 touched a week ago in the British colony.

Silver also rose today to $39 an ounce in London, $1 off its previous record high of $40 reached on Jan. 2 in a worldwide scramble for precious metals in the wake of the Soviet move into Afghanistan. Silver closed at $37.25 Friday.

In London, the British pound rose to $2.2675 from $2.2575 late Friday, despite a national steel strike.

In Montreal Friday, the U.S. dollar closed at $1.1638, down 2-25.

Trident staff march on MPs

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Sixty of the 107 Trident Aircraft employees laid off last week gathered this morning at the downtown Victoria employment centre to register for unemployment insurance.

Carrying placards with slogans criticizing the Conservative government, which last year cut off federal funds for the Sidney firm, they later marched on the campaign headquarters of local Tory MPs Allan McKinnon of Victoria and Don Munro of Esquimalt-Saanich.

He promised he would raise the matter again at this Friday's cabinet meeting.

"I'll let them know of the size and the scale of the problem and we'll go over it again," McKinnon said.

About the employees' demands for Ottawa to reinstate the federal loan guarantees, McKinnon said: "If I could I would do so but I can't."

"I've said all I can say without making foolish promises I can't keep," McKinnon said.

He told the Trident workers: "If you feel I can't represent you adequately it's time to pick somebody else."

The minister held out the possibility of some offset work when the federal fighter aircraft contract is awarded "as soon as we get returned."

This statement brought laughter from the Trident protesters.

"If we aren't in business, who are you going to divide it up among?" asked one employee.

After leaving McKinnon's headquarters the protesters went out Quadra Street to confront Munro, whose riding includes the airport, where the plant is located.

Trident plant electrician Al Hammond said in an interview: "I never voted federally NDP in my life but I will this time. This has made up my mind."

Hammond said he's now lost two jobs in six months because of Prime Minister Joe Clark's austerity measures.

He was laid off at the dockyard last July when the feds cut back funds for the Yukon refit. Luckily, the industrial electrician was hired by Trident a month later. That job lasted until Friday, when the chairman of the board announced the company was going into trusteeship and all but a handful of employees were laid off.

Most of the protesters hoped the trustee — the B.C. Development Corp. — can work something out with the remaining half dozen company executives to revive Trident and rehire those let go.

Said Hammond: "It was a good company. We had the pin pulled out from under us just as we were going into production."

Hammond said the actions of Clark's government had made 110 "instant politicians" of the Trident staff who were going to work against the re-election of local Conservatives Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro.

"It's a change of government we're all hoping for," said Hammond, noting that the Liberals had initiated the federal loan guarantees which enabled Trident to get into production and the NDP had promised support for the firm.

Hammond said if Trident can get going again, it has offers of work from other aircraft companies that could tide it over the present crisis.

"McDonnell-Douglas has promised us 10 years work," he said.

Boeing is also interested in having Trident manufacture parts for it and other firms have inquired.

"But what company will give us work until we've solved our financial problems?"

Hammond said now all defence aircraft in B.C. and Alberta are flown back to Ontario for overhauls and repairs.

"What's the matter with Trident getting some of that work?"

Sam Wylie, toolroom foreman and spokesman for the group, said Trident will probably lose its skilled toolmakers — men who had been gathered from all over to design the machines which make the parts for the company's amphibious Trigull.

"They're in demand," he said.

Soviet trade cuts stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is warning that normal trade with the Soviet Union will not resume soon "under even the best of circumstances," as his administration steps up a campaign of reprisals that might lead to a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Strongly defending his handling of the crises in Afghanistan and Iran, Carter said Sunday night that "political considerations and economic profit" must be set aside in responding to the threats they pose.

Earlier, a White House official said Carter "cannot support U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are still in Afghanistan."

The president sent Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher to Europe Sunday to consult with U.S. allies about a possible Olympic boycott and joint military and economic aid to Pakistan, which borders Afghanistan.

Carter tentatively has approved $400 million in U.S. military and economic aid to Pakistan beginning immediately, if Congress consents, the administration said.

All the weapons would be "defensive" and planes would be excluded in deference to India's concern about strengthening Pakistan, its neighbor and longtime antagonist.

The administration's thrust Sunday also included a renewed threat to Iran. Defence Secretary Harold Brown indicated a naval blockade of that country still is being considered to counter its holding of 50 U.S. hostages.

"Specifically, we cannot rule out the option of cutting off Iranian imports by one means or another," he said when asked about a possible blockade.

'No' in PQ referendum might spark violence

MONTREAL (CP) — A vote against sovereignty-association in the Quebec referendum next spring could cause a rebirth of violence in the province, says Jacques-Yvan Morin, Quebec education minister and vice-premier.

"A vote against the Quebec government in the referendum could provoke a rebirth of violence because young people have put all their hopes in the Parti Quebecois," Morin said in an interview with Le Monde last week. He had been in Paris for a private visit.

This was an apparent reference to the terrorist activities of the defunct Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ), which sought to promote Quebec independence through the use of violence for nearly a decade beginning in the early 1960s.

In the referendum expected in May or June, the Quebec government is asking for a mandate to negotiate a sovereignty-association arrangement by which the province would become an independent state but would retain economic links with the rest of Canada.

Morin also said that "a no vote in the referendum would not put an end to the fight for sovereignty."

As for the Canadian federal elections, Morin said he hoped the Liberals led by former prime minister Pierre Trudeau would be re-elected.

Trudeau's positions "are very firm on the constitutional question and this could cause conflict with (Quebec Liberal leader) Claude Ryan," Morin said.

"Quebecers will know better what to expect with Trudeau than with (Prime Minister Joe) Clark whose low-key policies have prevented the voters from forming an opinion on his government."

Hundreds flee two derailments

Hundreds of persons were evacuated from their homes as officials worked to clean up after train derailments that spilled chemicals into a stream in Ohio and set fire to a tanker in Pennsylvania.

About 500 to 700 persons in Arizona ate Sunday dinner in Red Cross shelters after two propane tankers were derailed.

Ohio authorities said about 750 persons were evacuated Sunday after 17 cars of a 68-car Conrail freight train were derailed and one of the cars spilled a highly toxic chemical identified as toluene diisocyanate.

Smugglers digging in

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli private investigators are mounting a search in the Sinai Desert for an improbable buried treasure — 140 Mercedes Benz cars believed stolen in Israel and waiting to be dug up and smuggled into Egypt.

The border between Israel and Egypt, constantly shifting as Israel withdraws from the Sinai, has become a paradise for Israeli and Arab smugglers trafficking in everything from cars to towels.

Police sources say the traffic is huge, but figures are hard to come by. One indicator comes from Shmuel Flatto-Sharon, a member of Israel's parliament who contends that about 140 West German Mercedes Benzes are buried in the Sinai sands on the Israeli side of the lines, waiting to be dug up and sold when the area is turned back to Egypt.

Flatto-Sharon has started a group called the Mercedes Victims, which is renting a helicopter and four Jeeps to hunt for the buried cars around the dunes near El Arish, the only major town in Sinai. The hunt is set to begin Tuesday. Police and Israeli soldiers have already dug up 32 vehicles in the area.

Flatto-Sharon's secretary, Zvi Vilder, says the thieves, both Arabs and Israelis, drive the cars to Gaza with fake Gaza registration plates. There they sell them to local Bedouin Arabs familiar with the pathless sands of the area, who take them off for burial.

Some of the cars have already made their way to Egypt, and one Israeli journalist reported riding in a Cairo taxi that had the Hebrew words — "Onward Paratroopers" — still stenciled on its door.

The wealthy Flatto-Sharon has a personal stake in the problem. His own Mercedes, an $86,000 SL-450, complete with television, radio-telephone and bar, disappeared several months ago. It is believed to have made the familiar route from Tel Aviv to the Sinai burial grounds.

The smuggling has been one of the topics discussed by the joint Israeli-Egyptian military committee on Sinai. Committee members flying over the area recently sighted the stolen vehicle of an Israeli brigadier-general.

Israeli soldiers recently stopped an Arab truck driver on his way to Gaza. It turned out the truck was stolen, and loaded on the back was a Mercedes taxi — also stolen.

Olympic move 'if IOC agrees'

Times News Services

Prime Minister Joe Clark said today Canada will consider alternate sites for the 1980 Olympics only if the International Olympic Committee (IOC) believes Moscow is unsuitable.

"If they — the IOC — are looking elsewhere for a site, we are prepared to look at Montreal," Clark told a caller on a Hamilton radio station open-line show.

A White House official Sunday said President Carter "cannot support U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are still in Afghanistan."

Ruled out by the Carter administration, it was learned, is arranging alternative Olympic games in a Western city, such as Montreal or Munich.

The president sent Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher to Europe Sunday to consult with U.S. allies about a possible Olympic boycott.

But Lord Killanin, IOC president, said in Ireland Sunday that there was no possibility of switching the Games from Moscow.

In an interview in the Sunday Press, Killanin said the games would go ahead as planned and a switch to Munich, Montreal or anywhere else was "physically impossible."

"When the IOC gave the games to Moscow, the American Olympic Committee was strongly in support," Killanin said. "We do not go back on our word."

Clark said Canada would likely participate in the Games if the IOC decided Moscow should remain the site despite the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"I don't want to boycott the Games. I want Canada to participate."

Clark had announced Friday that, along with a number of sanctions against the Soviet Union, Canada would take a leading role in discussions with other nations to have the Games withdrawn from Moscow.

In the first Soviet response to calls for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics, a top official of the games said such attempts have failed in the past and a newspaper Sunday accused President Carter of using sports for "political blackmail."

But this weekend, Vladimir Popov, first deputy chairman of the 1980 Olympic Organizing Committee, said there are some who hope to undermine this summer's games.

"They do not make honest, businesslike critical remarks but are attempting to use the present situation in the world for imposing the idea of boycotting the Moscow games," he said in an article in the newspaper Izvestia.

at Trident in quality assurance, said: "We were over the hump and things were looking good."

The 30-year veteran of aircraft work in the armed forces left the service late in 1978 and got the job at Trident — related to what he had been doing at Comox with the VU 33 Squadron — last April.

"Well if persuasiveness will do it, I'm sure it will," he said when asked if he had any hopes of Trident starting up again. "The big thing in our favor is the MoT licensing."

Ironically, just as the financial crisis created by one department of government was breaking, the department of transport certified Trident to make aircraft parts for other manufacturers.

Trident purchasing agent Lyle Wilson had been employed only a year. He had left a job at Windsor Machine Ltd.

"It was a shock. It was even more of a shock to me, unfortunately. I was away sick that day and I got a phone call."

Up to the last minute, there seemed to be indications the company would be bailed out.

"There seemed to be a lot of positive things," said Wilson, as he filed in to file his unemployment insurance claim.

Maestro Kostelanetz dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Andre Kostelanetz, world famous orchestral conductor and guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic since 1952, died in Haiti Sunday night. He was 78.

A spokesman in New York said Kostelanetz was vacationing in Haiti and died of a heart attack following complications of pneumonia.

The Russan-born musician had been active until the end, conducting four concerts of the San Francisco Symphony over the holidays. He was scheduled to conduct the New York Philharmonic, where he held the record in the number of seasons he was guest conductor, on Feb. 9.

Kostelanetz received his musical eduction at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, emigrated to the United States in 1922 and was naturalized in 1928. He made his first big success on CBS radio conducting his own orchestral shows. He also made many motion pictures and conducted leading orchestras in this country and overseas.

During the Second World War he conducted servicemen's orchestras and was active in the North African, Persian Gulf and Italian war theatres. After the war he was much in demand as a guest conductor of major orchestras and joined the Philharmonic's roster in 1952. He was musical director and conductor of the Philharmonic's summer Promenades Concerts series.

The conductor was twice married and twice divorced. His first wife was the Metropolitan Opera soprano Lily Pons and his second was Sara Gene Orcutt.

Doctors guarded on Tito

BELGRADE (Reuter) — Physicians for Yugoslav President Josip Tito said today an operation on blood vessels in his left leg was less successful than hoped.

A medical report by eight doctors broadcast by the official news agency Tanjug said the general state of the 87-year-old leader's health was good and that his recovery after Sunday's operation, to remove a blood clot from his leg, was proceeding normally.

But the eight medical professors added: "The surgical operation on blood vessels in his left leg, despite a temporary improvement, has not given the desired effect."

Officials at the cardiovascular clinic in Ljubjana, in northwestern Yugoslavia, said the president's heart, pulse and breathing are normal.

Tito, life president of the Communist party and state, underwent surgery when he did not respond to medication and hydrotherapy for a blockage in an artery in his left leg, his doctors said.

Officials said there is no reason for concern and he is expected to recover normally.

Talks derailed after 18 hours

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union and management negotiators in the B.C. Railway dispute bargained for 18 hours until 5 a.m. this morning but reached a stalemate over the contentious proposal to reduce manpower on the strike-bound railway.

Members of the Joint Council of Railway Unions, representing 2,200 workers on the Crown-owned railway, stormed out of the meeting at one point, saying they were fed up with what they called the company's lackadaisical bargaining, a spokesman said. They returned shortly after.

The breakdown occurred when the council demanded negotiation of 18 trade-related items in the contract dispute. The company replied it would not respond to those items until the unions dealt with the manning issue.

Talks were scheduled to resume later today to allow company and union negotiators a few hours sleep after the marathon bargaining session. Gabriel Somjen, company spokesman, said 32 outstanding issues, including the manning clause, will be raised.

The manning issue is the major obstacle to settling the strike which began Dec. 18. The railway wants to remove one of two brakemen on most crews, a practice it says is standard on most other North American railways. The union claims the plan will endanger other crewmen and the public.

The strike is costing the provincial economy an estimated $1 million a day, and northern communities, which depend on rail movement of forest products to coast shipping points, have been hardest hit.

Soviets' invasion protested by 50

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 50 people, carrying placards bearing anti-communist slogans in both Arabic and English, demonstrated in downtown Vancouver Saturday against the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

The protest march was sponsored by the 4,000-member B.C. Muslim Association in aid of the Afghanistan Relief Committee.

Mahoud Murad, committee secretary-treasurer, said the group hopes to raise $10,000 to aid Afghani refugee families forced to flee to neighboring Pakistan.

Among the marchers was Enno Jarve, who migrated to Canada from Estonia in 1952. He said he was participating in the march because he opposes communism.

"We lost everything to the Russians when they invaded Estonia in the Second World War," he said.

Charlie Paris, president of the Canadian Association of Christians and Jews, said he was there to demonstrate solidarity against the Soviet invasion.

"Often there is not much unity among Christians and Jews and Muslims, but it is important to make a show of solidarity and that is why I came out," he said.

CP ferry row in stalemate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks between ferry masters and Canadian Pacific management to settle a dispute which has halted ferry operations between Nanaimo and Vancouver since Jan. 7 appear to have reached a stalemate, a Canadian Merchant Service Guild spokesman said Sunday.

Leo Gray said management still wants 19 crewmen on board the CP ferry Princess of Vancouver and the four masters, who are responsible for vessel safety, want 25 crew members.

CP spokesman Don Bower said the dispute likely will be discussed further this week, but no date has been set for talks.

Last week, CP laid off 11 of the 27 crew members on the ferry including seamen and engineroom crew. The catering staff also was cut to three from 20.

Other officers and seamen had refused to work on three CP truck and train carriers, but returned to their jobs last Wednesday leaving only the Princess of Vancouver in dock.

Meanwhile, the guild contract with CP expires Jan. 31. Talks have not yet started on a new agreement.

Ambulance contract rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial ambulance employees have rejected by 90 per cent a three-year contract offer from the Emergency Health Services Commission, a spokesman for the union representing them said Saturday.

Dave Skidmore of local 873 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said about 70 per cent of the 489 ambulance employees voted to turn down the offer which would have given them wage increases of eight per cent annually.

The union wants a 15-per-cent increase in a one-year contract, Skidmore said.

Stumpage fee formula under fire from mills

FORT NELSON (CP) — The formula for setting stumpage fees in northeastern B.C. is unfair because it fails to consider the unique geography of the region, say spokesmen for the three mills in this tiny community dependent on the lumber industry.

Stumpage fees are the royalty lumber companies pay to the provincial government for every standing tree they cut. The rate is calculated by subtracting operating costs and a profit allowance from the selling price of wood products such as lumber, veneer, wood chips and plywood.

For example, if the selling price of lumber is $200 a thousand board feet, operating costs are $150 and the 10-per-cent allowable profit is $20, the stumpage fee would be $30 a tree.

The Fort Nelson mills complain that selling prices are determined by a moving average of prices from 20 mills north of Prince George over a three-month period, beginning four months before the stumpage fees are paid.

Stumpage fees paid last December — when lumber prices dipped because of the winter construction slowdown — were based on higher prices in August, September and October, said Bob Lunde, general manager of Tackama Forest Products.

The local mills want stumpage fees based on the selling price of forest products closer to the time of manufacture.

They argue that mills elsewhere don't feel fluctuations in the fees as acutely because their geography permits logging almost year-round. When stumpage fees are unattractively high, they can stop chopping and keep the mill running on stockpiled timber. When the fees are low, they make up for lost time.

In Fort Nelson logging can take place only 85 days each year when the usually marshy forest grounds are frozen by winter ice.

"We can't get at the trees in the summer when the ground is muskeg," said Lunde.

"When you can log only 85 days, it's impossible in Fort Nelson to modulate market swings. The formula as now does not recognize the risk to Fort Nelson mills, the risk being you can't average out prices."

Lunde said the stumpage formula has enough flexibility to enable the government to take care of Fort Nelson's unique problems.

News isn't advertising

Canada's chief electoral officer has taken an ill-considered swipe at one of the fundamental standards by which most newspapers operate. To few journalists' surprise, his latest edict has raised the wrath of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association.

J.O. Gorman has proposed that the publication of certain types of news stories should be prohibited the day before the Feb. 18 federal election.

The Canadian Elections Act forbids candidates from advertising 24 hours prior to election day. Gorman believes that reporting a candidate's remarks urging voters to support a specific party is subject to the same restriction.

Gorman has neglected the most basic distinction between a news story and an advertisement. A political candidate, or for that matter anyone, can purchase an advertisement in a newspaper as long as its content and design are legal and fall within the bounds of good taste.

Nobody purchases a news story. If a candidate (or anyone else) makes a speech or is interviewed, he has no control over how much of what he says will be printed, where it will appear in the paper, or if indeed it will be printed at all.

Naturally some people are better at second-guessing what newspaper editors think is interesting and newsworthy than others. But they take their chances like anyone else.

Gorman claims a fuzzy area occurs at election time when a reporter asks a politican questions on certain policies and the published report contains a plug for a party. He says it is advertising if the quoted candidate is beatinga drum for himself or his party. Nonsense.

With an advertisement, the candidate has control over what is said about him, though not necessarily over where it appears in the paper. That is not true about news columns.

In addition, as a spokesman for the association says, most newspapers would not ordinarily carry news stories urging readers to support a certain party. If a candidate has nothing else to say other than vote for me, that in itself might be news — once.

The criteria journalists use to decide on which remarks or events is news defy a simple explanation. Variables like a newspaper's size, location and the attitudes and personalities of newspaper employees are immense. It is enough to say that over long periods of time criteria for news remain relatively constant. To impose restrictions, even for one day, on what the news columns of a newspaper should carry amounts to censorship.

Arrogance revisited

Pierre Trudeau must be banking on a sizeable percentage of the electorate being enamored with his arrogance. Twice last week he displayed the one personality trait that has been credited with abetting his downfall in the May 22 federal election.

The man who prides himself on his constitutional knowledge must have been either arrogant or naive to expect the country to swallow his dissertation on just what a defeated government can do prior to an election. Constitution experts have analysed his remarks and ruled him out of order.

Indeed, the prime minister of a defeated government is not required to consult the leader of the opposition before embarking on a new policy initiative. Since Trudeau made no effort to consult with the opposition while he was prime minister of a defeated government before the 1974 federal election, one suspects that naivete had nothing to do with his latest comment.

Now Trudeau has scuttled a national televised debate between the three party leaders. He wanted a series of debates between cabinets ministers and their opposition counterparts. A good idea but logistically impossible for the networks. He wanted an alteration to the format used for the debate prior to the May 22 election. Trudeau didn't have his way so he quit the debate.

GEOFFREY GODSELL

Historical recipe for invasion

There is a natural law explaining the Soviet thrust into Afghanistan.

It is a law that should set alarm bells ringing loud and clear in the United States and the Western alliance as a whole — not to mention in all the lands of Southwest Asia.

Starkly stated, it is that all empires will expand, absorbing unstable areas on their borders. The expansion continues until those borders are stabilized, either by reaching a natural barrier of geography, or by being brought to a halt by a countervailing zone of stability.

It was a zone of stability that helped contain the Soviet threat of expansion into Western Europe after the Second World War. The U.S. sponsored Marshall Plan, followed by the establishment of NATO, revitalized Western Europe and kept it out of the Soviet empire.

Instability now has brought the Soviet Army into Afghanistan and is shifting the boundary of the Soviet empire southward from the Oxus (or Amu Darya) River to the Khyber Pass and, at its southwestern extremity, only 300 miles from the Persian Gulf.

Matter of stability

Directly in the path of the expansion lie Pakistan and Iran. But can these two lands, under present circumstances, offer stability enough to block further Soviet expansion? Or can they at least ensure against a deteriorating situation likely to invite further expansion — whether or not that is the present long-term aim of the Kremlin?

Back in 1884, when the Russian czars — pushing their empire outward into Central Asia — occupied the Merv Oasis, bringing what is now Soviet Turkmenistan under their sway, a great debate ensued in Britain over the potential threat to Queen Victoria's Indian empire. The British doves accused the hawks of "Mervousness." The British hawks said the Russian move was a legitimate cause to go to war.

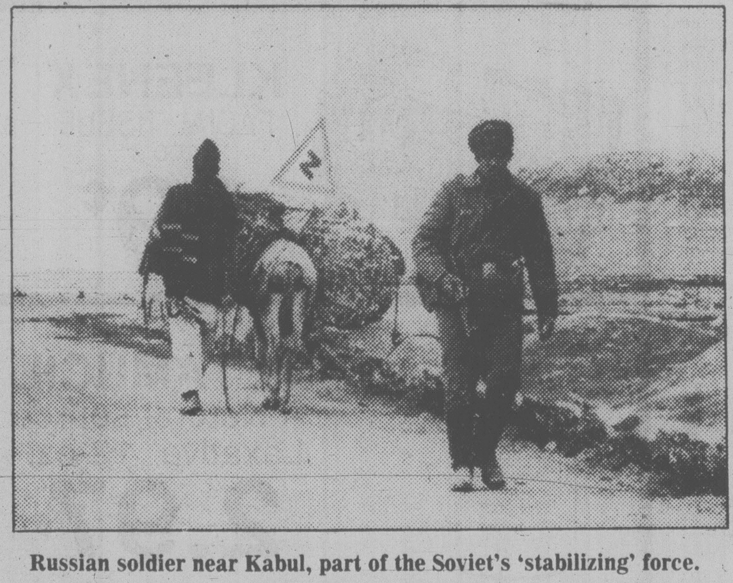
The Russian ambassador in London hurried around to the Foreign Office to invoke "the great difficulty which both Russian and English statesmen had always acknowledged to exist for a civilized power to stop short in the extension of its territory where uncivilized tribes were its immediate neighbors."

From 19th-century czar to 20th-century commissar, the vocabulary and the semantics have changed. For Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and his spokesmen, the words "civilized" and "uncivilized" are out, and such phrases as responding to "imperialist and hegemonistic" threats are in.

But the law of empire underlying both Czar Alexander III's seizure of Merv and Brezhnev's seizure of Afghanistan remains unchanged.

It makes little or no difference whether one accepts the more malign or the more benign interpretation of Brezhnev's sending combat troops to take over Afghanistan for Babrao Karmal, the puppet whom he has installed.

According to the more malign interpretation, the Soviets have held a clear game plan since the coup in Afghanistan that ousted King Zahir Shah in 1973. The conscious aim attributed to the Kremlin is to advance the Soviet empire to the warm-water outlets on the Gulf and the Indian Ocean.



Russian soldier near Kabul, part of the Soviet's 'stabilizing' force.

This would put their hand on the main source of the noncommunist world's vital oil imports. Long term, it also would offer easier access to maritime routes for the products of Moscow's landlocked Central Asian empire.

Muhammad Daoud, who ousted the king in 1973, was himself of royal lineage and a close relative of the monarch he deposed. But significantly (as the more suspicious Afghan nationalists see it), he worked initially with the Pavcham faction of the small Afghan Communist party, whose leader was and is the same Karmel now installed under the protection of Soviet guns.

When Daoud swung away from the Parcham people, he himself was ousted by a joint front of the Parcham and Khalq factions of the Afghan Communist Party. A power struggle then ensued between the two factions. The Khalq leaders, Nur Muhammad Taraki and Hafizullah Amin, in turn were eliminated. Now, with Soviet help, Karmal — always reputed to be the most pliably pro-Moscow of the Communists — has come out on top.

The more benign interpretation of events is that the Soviets were sucked involuntarily into Afghanistan once Communists had installed themselves in power there and had invoked Soviet patronage and protection. Put this way, the Soviet move is represented as defensive rather than aggressive.

The argument is made that, given the Muslem population of at least 45 million inside the Soviet Union, the Soviet leaders could not afford to let Communist clients of theirs next door be seen falling to a Muslem insurrection.

But both interpretations end up with the Soviet Union at the Khyber Pass. Both result in the expansion of the Soviet empire to the eastern frontier of Iran (on whose northern border it already sat) and to the northern border of Pakistan.

Are today's Iran and Pakistan stable and strong enough — the Russian ambassadov in London in 1884 would have said "civilized" enough — to halt further widening of the Soviet empire? Or can they thwart the kind of subversion or disintegration that Moscow could initiate and then interpret as a threat to the security of its frontiers, with the implied need to expand them further?

Help both

If the answer to both those questions is "no," the response of America should be self-evident — at least in theory: Help both Iran and Pakistan quickly become strong enough to resist the worst from Soviet empire building. But, in practice, that is not going to be so easy. The last thing that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Iran seems to want is anything to do with the United States, unless it be opportunites to insult and humiliate it.

In Pakistan, President Zia ul-Haq is a martial law ad inistrator whose broad base of popular appeal has yet to be proven. And if America identifies itself with him too closely, it risks finding itself stuck with another "shah" — albeit one in a modest Paklistani, rather than grandiose Persian, mold.

Victoria Landmarks

"Grandma, why does your stove have legs, and your bath have feet?"

"Well, in winter the cat likes to sleep under the stove and Grandpa can warm or dry his workboots. We keep the bath because it's strong and long, and its white enamel is just as good as when it came in the catalogue order all those years ago."

In the Capital Regional District there are still a few such stoves and baths. The old mail order catalogues are rare, however, as outdated catalogues were often recycled in basic, thrifty, practical fashion

But the Hudson's Bay Company's Autumn and Winter Catalogue, 1910-1911, was published as a book in 1977. In 1969, selected pages from Eaton's catalogues, 1886-1930, were published as a book, "A Shopper's View of Canada's Past." It's in the Reference Room of the Central Library of the Greater Victoria Public Library. (It may be read and studied there but not borrowed.)

Both books show styles in clothing, household furnishings and equipment as well as sporting goods and children's toys. The prices quoted seem very low until compared with the wages of the time.

When next you consult a mail order catalogue, consider it as a chapter of social history. For that's what it is.

Prognosis

Since this is the time for prognostications I'd like to make a few of my own:

(1) Ayatollah Khomeini will eventually be perceived as a genuine religious leader, whose destiny it is to consolidate the most remarkable revolution of our time.

(2) The world will come to see the horrors of the Pahlavi regime, that the suffering endured by the Iranian people — being held hostage by the U.S.-backed shah 27 years — justified the overthrowing of the "international law" in order to vindicate a more instrinsic law of morality and justice.

(3) Russian style of hockey will — because of the invincible force of individuality (so long denied in the collectivist system) — favor more improvisational, more imaginative forms of offence, while, on the other hand, the Canadians will be driven to discipline their attacking formations, indicating their respect for the intricate, aesthetic patterns of play characterized in the more collective approach of the Soviets.

(4) The phenomenon of the Pope's visit proved the appetite within everyone for a more holistic perception of the universe — this, in contradistinction to the prevailing secular, politicalized view. Thus the dimension of the spiritual — in a profound and not necessarily doctrinal sense — will begin to replace the absolutes of "relativism."

(5) Attention will begin to be placed on the possibility of an inherent as opposed to a purely arbitrary order in the universe, and out of this will emerge a sense of cosmic script of which man is the central actor. McLuhan's "global village" will force us to see how we are all intimately involved in the destiny of each other's lives, and that our only hope for an evolutionary momentum to the play will lie in the discovery of how to unfold the laws of "Beingness" — man's full individual and universal potential.

(6) The energy problem will only be resolved when the West has a complete change of heart about its perception of its relationship with the earth. In other words, the energy shortage is a direct signal from mother nature herself about the extent of man's dissociation from an organic relationship with the environment. Only in the appreciation of the gift of natural resources — and a willingness to conserve and find more ecologically sound alternate sources of energy — will man overcome this problem. — Robin W. Carlsen, 1225 Sunnyside Avenue.

Too silent

The majority of eligible voters in Canada, especially in B.C. are senior citizens, the retired, the pensioners. Their ranks belong the pioneers, builders of roads and rails, farmers, fighters for law and order, in short: Canada would not be the country of to-day, were it not for those "old timers".

They are the greatest cash consumers, lowest debtors, greatest bunch of willing volunteers. Politicians mention them in passing, making promises with "split tongue", expect their votes, but hope to keep them as the silent majority. Isn't it about time, Grandpa and Grandma were getting out of their rockers and making their voices heard loud and clear. Tell the party and candidates what is expected of them and demand delivery. — Ester Diegel, Victoria.

Tune may change

That recent invasion of Afghanistan by some of Russia's powerful, aggressive, well-molded military folks has most of the world, particularly the Moslem world, in a heart-palpitating state of uneasiness.

Many people are asking all kinds of questions. Should the Russians be boycotted at this year's Moscow Olympics? Is Russia getting ready to conquer the Middle East and its oil fields? Are Jimmy Carter and the CIA brainwashing the Russians to act in such an unruly manner? Is it a Nixon plot?

The questions could rattle on until the sun has turned to ice, but one thing is almost a certainty, one of Afghanistan's neighbors, Iran, is going to be compelled fairly soon to ponder the idea of asking those evil, immoral Americans for some sort of help should the big, hungry Russian bear start waving it's claws over any sacred Iranian soil.

Of course, Iran's wise leader, the Ayatollah Khomeini, could tell his sheep that Russian bear is more digestible than American crow, who knows? — John Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Man of the Year

Organizations like the Salvation Army and Cool-Aid save us from being called a nation which ignores its "untouchables." We rate at the top in providing unemployment benefits, welfare aid, family assistance, etc.

But little is done in preventing tragedy for the growing numbers of homeless drifters, sinking into illness and despair, to over-burden our prisons, our hospitals, and mental institutions.

Has Cool-Aid President Joe Haegert, Sr., been honored previously as the "Man of the Year"? He deserves that honor. As a man of 78, he is keeping younger than his years, with compassion and conviction still fighting for his ideals. What a story he could tell — a life of courage in war and peace, co-operating in mercy for his needy fellowmen.

We hope that reason in a spirit of compromise may set a just assessment of the property needed for Cool-Aid, with donations, if need be, from individual citizens, thankful that they have roofs over their heads. — B. M. Richardson, Windsor, Ontario.

Warmongering

One of us is an Egyptian-Canadian, the other an American-Canadian. We refer to Dr. Raphael Patai's series on the "seemingly incomprehensible" events in Iran published in the Times just before Christmas.

Rather than nauseate Times readers with repetitions of the distortions contained in the series, we've confind ourselves to exposing the essence of what Patai says — and doesn't say.

If to some people the events in Iran "seem beyond comprehension," to others they are perfectly understandable. The events themselves are part of a complex situation which Patai does not explain but rather confuses. If you want to begin to understand why anyone behaves as he does, go and live under the conditions he lives under.

We are told that Patai is an authority on "the Arabs," so we wonder why he never tells us of their myriad origins or their present-day homesites. Today's "Arabs" are descended from Spaniards, Vandals, Berbers, French, Greek, Romans, Phoenicians, Philistines, Hittites, Hurrians, Turks, Armenians, Kurds, Persians, Sumerians and Arabs (from Arabia). Their descendants can be found in Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya, Egypt, Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Yemen D.R., Oman, United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain, Kuwait, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, Israel, Iran . . . just to name a few. Ignoring their ethnic diversity, Patai describes small groups, often using lurid terms which he then expands to cover large and diverse populations. He wraps all these people in an Arab-Package and labels it with a few simple characterizations — then ensures we remember his labels by sheer repetition.

Patai says nothing of the Shah's acknowledged terrorism and extortionate profiteering, of the long-term U.S. support of the Shah and his father — or of U.S. stated determination to secure its oil supply and military bases. To presume to explain the events in Iran while omitting all mention of the complaints both of the students holding the U.S. hostages and of the Iranians against the Shah is a total distortion of fact.

Patai, speaking ex cathedra, said he would "set the facts straight." But by his exaggerations and omissions he has invited us to forfeit our own thoughts and observations — to declare ourselve incompetent — so that he may substitute his thoughts and observations for ours.

It is necessary that we resist warmongering under any mask — particularly the academic — though we also detect the hot scent of oil on the breath of the North American News Alliance. — Helmi Rafla and Carol Whitney, R.R. #2, Sooke.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Quote of the weak

As the crisis began, those who took over the American embassy in Tehran were described as Iranian students. After a while, the word "students" began to appear in quotation marks, as if reporters were uncomfortable with the designation. Finally, former diplomat Henry E. Catto Jr. demanded: "What schools do these people attend? . . . What course are they taking, American Humiliation 101? The fact is that these young Iranians are political terrorists, blackmailers and kidnappers, and they should be so labelled ... They are 'students' to the gullible."

Since "students" is a word connoting youth and idealism, many reporters and commentators — to avoid the appearance of being manipulated by propagandists — took to placing quotation marks around the term, or to adding sneer words.

Sneer words are those adjectives that put some distance between the speaker and the subject by saying, "I'm using this next word under protest." Examples of sneer words are "self-proclaimed," "self-styled," "would-be," "purported" and that Soviet favorite, "so-called." Thus, the terrorists at the embassy were referred to as "the so-called students;" if the commentator were on television, the listener could almost hear the quotation marks added: "The so-called 'students' . . ." Reporters who were unhappy with quotation marks, but did not want to go so far as calling the occupiers "terrorists," chose the neutral "militants."

CHARLES de GAULLE

The use of quotation marks to say "their word, not mine" is growing. The editor of American Speech, John Algeo, says it was noted with disapproval by H. W. and F. G. Fowler in The King's English, in the 1931 edition, as a device used by writers who regarded "the reader's case as desperate;" World Book Dictionary editor Sol Steinmetz thinks that "disbelieving quotation marks" first became popular during the Nazi era, and then were given a boost in the Vietnam years, especially around the word "advisers." He cites Time magazine, in 1964, as writing, "Sihanouk . . . claimed that American advisers had been in on the attack," and the same publication, in 1970, as writing, "Soviet 'advisers', serving with the Egyptian army . . ."

Disdain now has its own punctuation. One reason is that quotation marks are being used more often to call attention to a special meaning: Henry L. Trewhitt of The Baltimore Sun calls these "cop-out quotation marks" — when a writer uses a bit of jargon or a colloquialism and encloses it in quotes to show he really knows better. Another reason for putting rabbit ears on a word is the growing popularity of skepticism: those whose illusion is disillusionment revel in the use of the device that expresses disbelief and disavowal with four inverted commas, and trendy critics can even put quotation signs around a spoken word by wiggling two fingers of each hand.

I've been overworking the quotation-mark disdainer myself (and the hyphenated compound adjective, too) by knocking those self-appointed "guardians" of English "skills" or reviling the language slobs who "enrich" our discourse with quotation "marks." Consider, instead, the style of Charles de Gaulle. He needed no attention-getting ironic quotes to put down the United Nations. He called that organization "les nations dites unies."

Stick with "E"

The Association of Volunteer Proofreaders is falling down on the job. After a fairly good showing in spotting the misspelled "stupify" (correct: "stupefy"), and a really outstanding performance in nailing "redundency" (correct: "redundancy"), only a handful of the members of the association reported on my mistaken "permissable." (Wrote Emanuel Bloom of the Bronx, N.Y.: "As you say, ' "to ukase" is not permissable,' but is permissable permissible?")

Some ornery orthographers have objected to the correction here of former National Security Adviser Henry Kissinger's spelling of "advisor," contending that some dictionaries find the "o" permissible as an alternate form of "adviser," and, besides, what about "supervisor"? I don't buy that: spelling "adviser" with an "o" is as plainly a mistake as the misbegotten 'relevent" and "permissable." In a generation, the repeated mistaken usage may make the mistake correct, but let the alternate form work at it for a while.

Floutmanship

"The government of Iran must realize," read The New York Times transcript of President Carter's request to the United Nations for sanctions, "that it cannot flaunt, with impugnity, the expressed will and law of the world community."

When a president makes a blatant error in English in a formal address, that's linguistic news — and needs prompt correction, lest the force of the usage by the Highest Authority legitimate the error.

"Flaunt" means "to display ostentatiously;" its early uses had to do with coquettish strutting about, showing off gaudy silks, and the word still means "to parade one's possessions in a way to invite envy."

President Carter meant "flout," which means "to show contempt for." That quite different verb is akin to the noun "flute," and is rooted in whistling noises made in derision, as if by a flute. You can flout convention and you can flout authority, but you cannot use "flaunt" for "flout" when you are talking about expressing contempt. The confusion between the two similar verbs is common, but presidential writers are expected to avoid making common mistakes in seeking to gain the common touch.

"Impugnity" is not a word. This was not Carter's fault; he said "impunity," which sounds the same, and the sound was mistranscribed. The "pun," pronounced "pyoon," is allied to "punishment"; the word "impunity" means "without punishment." The other spelling, based on the verb "to impugn" — "He's impugning my integrity" — is allied to "fight," as in "pugnacious" or "pugilist." Forget "impugnity," a nonexistent fighting word.

Another catchy usage in the same sentence is "world community," which has been bruited about lately as a substitute for the apparently sexist "mankind," with the special meaning of "the nations of the world gathered together." In 1888, the Earl of Carnarvon first spoke of "the community of Europe," and, in the early 1940s, Walter Lippmann popularized "the Atlantic community." Since "community" had a warmer connotation than "establishment," generals and spooks have been moving to "the defence community" and "the intelligence community." Carter's global village greening has enshrined "the world community," and we can leave it to NASA to replace the solar system with "the planetary community."

DOLLY PARTON

Lots of nourishment in that single sentence. As for the subject of the president's request, the word "sanction" is one of those rare terms (like "sanguine") that mean the opposite of themselves.

"Sanction" means "official approval," from the same root as "sanctify" and "saint"; as a verb, it means "to give permission." At the same time, "sanctions" have come to mean those actions, usually economic, used to punish a nation. In one sense, the word means "permission," to be coveted, and in the other sense, the word means "penalty," to be abhorred.

Strangely, nobody seems confused by this contradiction. Here's why (the most useful contribution advertising copywriters have made to the language is "here's why"): the plural turns the meaning around. When a sanction becomes "sanctions," its meaning switches from approval to restriction. This is not always the case — if you start to examine each of the sanctions, the individual sanction takes the negative meaning of the group — but, as pundits say, it is a useful rule of thumbsucking.

Got it? If you've got it, flaunt it.

Poorer crops price of peace

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

NYERI, Kenya — The bitterness of the Mau Mau war has long since faded, and the Kenyan highlands are again a peaceful place, farmed by Africans — both black and white — who have set down their guns and buried the past.

They have reached an accommodation with each other, as perhaps the Rhodesians will, that is based on neither love nor hate. Rather, its foundation is the simple recognition that times have changed, that the whites are now guests — no matter how deep their roots in this land.

"We have a tradition in our Kikuyu culture," said Frederick Ndirangu, 56, a former Mau Mau commander. "If you quarrel, you can never be friends until you fight. But once you fight, all the hatred is finished."

During the Mau Mau "emergency" from 1953 to 1956, Ndirangu commanded a band of 50 Kikuyu guerrillas in the nearby Aberdare Forest. Their raids on white farms and black villages were legendary and fearful.

"There were no good Europeans before the Mau Mau," Ndirangu said recently. "They abused us and they never gave us a chance to advance our intelligence. Now things are different. There is a good relationship. I remember the past, but I do not carry it with me."

Ndirangu, a big man with graying hair and a vice-like handshake, says that uhuru (freedom, or independence) brought his family many benefits. He has land now, and two of his sons are electricians in Nairobi; his other seven children are in school. He tips his hat to no one. The fight, he says, was worth fighting.

One of the men assigned during the war to track Ndirangu down was a British army captain named Sam Weller. "I had the old boy in my sights a couple of times," Weller recalled recently with a chuckle. Weller, who now employs Ndirangu as a driver, added, "But we are friends now. No one even speaks of Mau Mau any more. It was so long ago.

"The African, I think, isn't capable of the depth of emotion that the European has . . . You look at a good, solid, white hate and it can last for generations. Africans don't hate that way."

White preserve

Once, when 5,000 British families farmed in Kenya, these valleys and ridges beneath snow-capped Mount Kenya were known as the "white highlands." They were a white preserve in a black land, and it was here that the war was fought, independence won and the transfer of property begun.

Today, the region is called merely "the highlands." The white-owned farms are being bought by co-operatives and subdivided into small plots for subsistence farming, ending one way of life and starting another. As far as the eye can see, the once-empty glades are bursting with little mud homes whose tin roofs glisten like mirrors in the noontime sun.

Fewer than 100 white families farm the highlands now. As few as they are, they still represent the largest group of settler farmers left in black Africa. It is their hope to remain on the land that was turned green and productive through the sweat of their forefathers — but they speak little of the future.

As the large ranches are cut up, Kenya's agricultural output is declining — a worrisome omen for a land with no mineral wealth and one of the highest birthrates in the world. The government says that the subdividing must stop, that the white farmers must continue to farm if Kenya is to prosper. Yet the eventual destruction of the big farms seems inevitable.

Already there are frequent shortages in Kenya of rice, corn and flour, and agricultural production has declined every year for the last 11 years. Self-sufficient in wheat production as recently as five years ago, Kenya is now importing more than half of the 280,000 tons of grain it needs annually to feed its people.

Tax revenues are falling, too. The big farmer pays up to 45 per cent of his income in taxes; the subsistence farmer with four or five acres pays nothing.

"We used to say we'd never see this land split up, said Monty Brown, whose father came here in 1924 as a missionary doctor. "Now, come another 20 years, I'd be surprised if you don't find all the highlands covered with tin-roof huts."

Those whites who stayed through the Mau Mau war and after, believed the white man's days in Kenya to be nearly over; and on Aug. 12, 1963, four months before independence, several hundred European farmers and their wives packed the Nakuru town hall near here to hear what they thought would be their marching orders.

'We want you'

The late Jomo Kenyatta, the man who led the Mau Mau and would soon become Kenya's first head of state, walked quickly to the stage. He was 70 years old then, and he leaned on his walking stick. He talked quietly, his voice slowly gathering strength.

"We want you to stay and to farm well in this country," he said. "That is the policy of this government . . . What the government needs is experience, and I don't care where it comes from, I will take it with both hands . . ."

The whites stood and cheered.

There were about 45,000 Europeans (as all whites are called here) in Kenya then. Today there are 75,000 — probably the highest figure in black Africa — although most are businessmen and specialists working here for a limited time.

The white population includes 5,000 British subjects who have taken Kenyan citizenship and 5,000 Americans.

'Was no law so we made it'

NANYUKI — Before Kenya achieved independence, each of the white-settler communities sprinkled through the agricultural highlands had its own whites-only social club.

The only one that remains it the oldest one, the Nanyuki Sports Club. Its membership now is racially mixed, but the aura of the colonial past lingers.

Latham Leslie-Moore lives in Room No. 10, just down the walkway from the little library, and the other day he was reclining on his bed, a small shortwave radio tuned in to the BBC balanced on his stomach. It was the 16th anniversary of Kenya's independence, and a few miles away schoolchildren and a police band marched through sleepy Nanyuki to the applause of peasant farming families.

Extraordinary

"Oh, my, I've got some extraordinary stories," he said, delighted to have company and reaching for his scrapbook, "but I'm getting on towards 90, you know, and I get forgetful.

"I'll tell you this: those old days were incredible for the European. We were the law. There was no law, so we made it."

Leslie-Moore, who has a beard, arthritic legs and sad, misty eyes, spent 21 years in Tanzania as a colonial agricultural officer, once living in the bush for two years without visiting even a township. He survives on his modest pension.

In 1955, he left the Tanzanian mainland and moved onto an idyllic little island named Mshimboti, a few miles off shore. Then, as Ian Smith of Rhodesia was to do 10 years later, he proclaimed a unilateral declaration of independence from Britain. He, his two Rhodesian ridgeback dogs and his staff of six had been liberated.

Stay, bwana

"It was very democratic," he recalled. "I called my natives in from the coconut groves and sat them down and said, "Now look, they're talking about uhuru over on the mainland. Do you want to go with them or stay with me?" And they said, "We'll stay with you, bwana." So I said fine, and Mshimboti became independent, with me as the crown sultan.

"We had our own flag and I had my boys parade every morning at 6 when we raised it. Such a lovely island you've never seen. I intended to live there and die there. In fact, I had my own grave dug there."

But 12 years later, in 1967, Julius Nyerere, president of Tanzania, by then independent, sent a platoon of soldiers to attack Mshimboti. Leslie-Moore and his staff were kicked and clubbed with rifle butts and he was deported after several days in isolation. The island was turned into a guerrilla training base for the various African causes that Nyerere espouses.

"One gentleman kicked me here," Leslie-Moore said, touching his left cheek, "so I put my hands to protect myself and they broke three ribs. They were hooligans, horrible people."

Leslie-Moore propped himself up on the edge of the bed. "I'd love to get my island back," he said, "but realistically, I doubt that I ever will."

the channels. He could couple such a demand with an offer to have the Navy clear away the mines as soon as the hostages were released.

The navy could cover the entrance to the gulf with warships if the president opted for this military step. However, government officials explained, the real problem is not stopping a merchant ship but having enough air and sea power to go to war in that area if the Soviet Union should challenge the blockade.

If the Soviet Union saw the United States massing its warships and carrier based fighter planes off Iran, sources said, it could respond by sending its own warships to the scene.

In that event, the Iranian crisis would have escalated to a direct superpower confrontation. Also, U.S. Naval power in the Pacific would have been weakened, perhaps inviting a Soviet challenge there.

Besides Soviet ships, the United States must reckon with long-range Russian aircraft already patroling the sea lanes, such as the Backfire bomber.

In Iran, the state radio and official Pars news agency said all American correspondents will soon be expelled for allegedly publishing "biased reports." They quoted Ali Akbar Moinfar, oil minister and member of the Islamic Revolutionary Council, as saying the journalists would be expelled in comments at the conclusion of the council's meeting in Tehran.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said he would check with the council whether this meant expulsion of U.S. nationals or all journalists, American or not, working for U.S. news media.

The newspaper Bamdan quoted Foreign Press Director General Abolhassem Sadegh as specifically citing ABC News, the British Broadcasting Corp., The Times of London and the West German magazine Der Spiegel as among those who "have not reported fair news about Iran."

Since Khomeini came to power last January, a total 23 correspondents have been expelled.

The action of the council, which effectively rules Iran under the leadership of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, followed increased criticism of Western reporting and a threat by Foreign Minister Sadegh Gotbzadeh that the 50 American hostages in their 72nd day of capitivity might be held "more or less forever."

New posters criticizing the Western press for its coverage of the crisis appeared today outside the occupied U.S. Embassy, several days after an anti-press campaign began. The posters demanded that "American, British and West German reporters should be deported."

Questioned earlier whether Iran was ready to negotiate over the hostages, Ghotbzadeh said, "That is not true at all." He blamed the report on "international news agencies (which) distort the truth."

The U.N. Security Council Sunday night voted 10-2 in favor of economic sanctions against Iran, but the measure was killed by a Soviet and East German veto that U.S. Ambassador Donald F. McHenry called "a cynical and irresponsible use of veto power".

McHenry pledged the United States now will apply "firmly and vigorously," its own sanctions against Iran.

Carter stands firm

Brown, who just completed talks with Chinese leaders in Peking, said he expects continued co-operation with the Chinese in response to the Soviets. "I'm sure the Chinese will be assisting Pakistan in various ways," he said on the ABC News program Issues and Answers.

Carter, addressing the White House conference on small business, denounced the Soviet Union's "massive invasion of the small, nonaligned country of Afghanistan" and asked all Americans to "stand with me."

"Normal trade and commerce has been interrupted to demonstrate vividly our abhorrence and condemnation of terrorism and military aggression against innocent people," he told the 2,100 small business delegates.

"In reaching my decision to act, I had to face some tough choices," he said. "There are many risks. There are economic costs. We are sharing those costs, so the burden will not fall only on you or on American farmers or any other particular group."

Several of Carter's rivals for the presidency have sharply criticized his decision to embargo 17 million tons of grain to the Soviet Union, saying U.S. farmers will suffer more than the Russians.

However, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland predicted meat shortgages in the Soviet Union as a result of the U.S. embargo. Interviewed on the CBS News program Face the Nation, Bergland said he expects the Soviets to have a deficit of 14 million metric tons of grain, forcing them to cut livestock production five per cent to eight per cent below last year's levels.

"They're going to have protests from their consumers who have had a taste of the good life in recent years when meat production [illegible] been expanding," he said.

"I would advise anybody travelling to the Soviet Union, especially to the summer Olympics — bring your own lunch," Bergland said. "You're going to need it."

GOT A FLAT? START THE BUBBLE MACHINE — Gale-force winds that hit Nanaimo and what might have been a ripped seam deflated Malaspina College's huge $750,000 air-support gymnasium late Friday. The rubberized fabric roof of the 25,000-square-foot gym is supported at both ends by rigid walls, but the roof is held up by low-pressure air inside the structure. A cleaning crew was inside the building when it collapsed but no one was injured. There was water damage to some offices in the building, and some bent mezzanine railings, but the tarmac floor was unscathed. When it was inflated in February, 1974, college officials were assured the bubble building, built at half the cost of a conventional structure, could withstand any West Coast weather conditions.

Hydro memo shot down

An internal B.C. Hydro memo, questioning the need to build the proposed Cheekye-Dunsmuir transmission line to Vancouver Island, has been repudiated by Energy Minister Bob McClelland.

"It's hardly a Hydro memo," the minister said today.

"It's my understanding an employee of Hydro wrote a memo to somebody saying he didn't think the line was necessary. I don't put any credence in that at all."

A member of the Sunshine Coast Regional District has called for a Royal Commission inquiry into the proposed 500-kilovolt transmission line through his area because of the memo. But McClelland said, "There won't be any Royal Commission."

The memo, from building programs manager William Burton to lands division head Ernest Collins, criticizes Hydro for concealing the true cost of the line.

"It is noted that the magic figure of $315 million is still being quoted as the cost of Cheekeye-Dunsmuir. It is curious that we choose not to rush into print to correct this particular bit of public misinformation," the memo said.

Burton questions the wisdom of proceeding with what he says is a $1 billion project in the absence of a provincial energy policy.

However, McClelland said the government intends to go ahead with the line, and the only thing holding it up is the choice of an exact route.

"It's already been decided a long time ago and fully justified," he said.

McClelland also shot down a weekend report of a possible 25-per-cent-increase in natural gas prices for domestic users.

Waring runs in Saanich vote

Central Saanich Ald. Frank Waring says he will run for mayor in the March 15 byelection, bringing to two the number of candidates.

Waring, 66, says he believes the municipality needs a mayor with business and administrative experience.

Waring has been chairman of the council's budget committee for three years and is branch manager of wholesale distributors E.B. Horsman and Son in Victoria.

"There are going to be pressures for development and growth out here and one of the responsibilities of council is to control growth and make sure that whatever is done is in the best interests of the municipality," said Waring, an alderman since 1975.

Central Saanich Ald. Dave Hill also announced last week he would be a candidate in the byelection, called because Mayor Jean Butler is resigning for health reasons.

Gervais captures Grit nomination

Cobble Hill teacher Leo Gervais will be the Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands Liberal candidate in the Feb. 18 federal election.

David Anderson, the previous candidate, ran a distant third in last May's election, trailing behind winner Don Taylor of the Conservatives and Jim Manly of the New Democratic Party.

Gervais has been a teacher in the Cowichan school district for 13 years. He has taught at Elizabeth Fisher junior high school in Metchosin as well as private schools.

The Butchart Gardens' flowers are magnificent but it must be a tremendous chore to keep them watered, especially in the summer. How do they manage it?

It is all done overnight when the throngs of visitors have departed.

A massive automatic sprinkling system is turned on throughout the grounds.

The watering would be pretty expensive if the gardens didn't have their own reservoirs. Only the restaurant gets its water supply from the municipal source. They're not sure how many gallons it takes to keep Butchart's in bloom but it's plenty:

Since Jenny Butchart in 1908 started to transform an ugly 50-foot quarry into a thing of beauty, the gardens have grown into a major attraction employing 200 during the peak summer season and drawing more than 500,000 visitors a year.

The plants require plenty of attention from 35 full-time gardeners. Two horticultural consultants are kept busy year-round.

The gardens are open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. from Mother's Day until the end of September.

But the cut in visitor hours doesn't mean the flower displays are over until next spring. The plants continue to bloom until the first major frost, usually in early November.

Garden specialists plan a year ahead and buy bulbs and seeds for planting from various sources in Canada, Britain and the U.S..

A professional look at the '80s

Social services to tighten the belt

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Professionals in health care and government social agencies will put more effort in the 1980s into plugging the gaps in existing services.

And new services and programs won't be established unless they can be proved "cost-effective."

The belt-tightening forecast for the new decade was gathered from interviews with three Victoria spokesmen for the B.C. Association of Social Workers and other professionals in the field, at the end of a 10-year period of great expansion in social services and health care spending.

Keith Anderson, director of counselling at Victoria General Hospital, says hospitals and the medical profession are faced with a number of issues as they enter the '80s.

"We still haven't peaked with the age bulge," he says.

Twenty-six per cent of Victoria's population is over 65, and that figure is going to rise throughout the 1980s. It's a crucial statistic for hospital administrators. The elderly account for twice as many admissions to hospital as their proportion in the general population.

Hospitals will have to tackle the problems of depersonalized health care created by increasingly advanced technology. The costs of increased medical technology and general health care will pinch harder than before and the role of the hospital itself will undergo significant changes.

"Hospital health care has had its essential focus on illness," says Anderson.

Now there's a shift to emphasis on prevention.

A shift in attitude is also under way, Anderson says.

Hospitals, the journal of the American Hospital Association, recently published a long article on the need to humanize health services, to reverse the process by which the patient has become just a part of the machinery.

In the 1980s, professionals in the field will also work to accomplish a greater co-ordination of health services, especially for the handicapped.

Joyce Masselink, president of the south Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Association of Social Workers (BCASW), says the coming decade will bring a "sharper struggle" for dollars.

Those who push for new services must prove in the long term it's cost-effective.

Anderson foresees social workers influencing social policy more in the coming years. There will be a real need for people well-trained in the economics of socal policy — what it costs to do this instead of that, and how much money can be saved by taking option B instead of policy A.

The social workers' association has been examining the gaps in services, the places where individuals fall through the extensive net of existing aid programs. It wants the government to look at people who are not helped by the statutory services.

Volunteer groups have sprung up to fill a demand — for example, the NEED crisis line, Divorce Lifeline for couples undergoing the trauma of separation, Prime Time for women in their middle years — but their funding is tenuous at best.

The BCASW wants to see more preventive services. One social worker notes as an example the 18-to-25 age group. They're too old for child welfare services, they're out of school and there aren't any jobs for them. A young girl may get pregnant or her boyfriend may get in trouble with the law. Then a government agency will enter the picture, but in many cases it's too late. The problem could have been prevented with help at an earlier age.

The social planning council suggested by some aldermen and concerned professionals in Victoria as a means of pulling together various services in the capital region would be a helpful reform, says Masselink. Professionals are agreed on the need for more co-ordination.

Anderson suggests something like the family services associations operated in Edmonton, Calgary and Toronto. They're central agencies where professionals with different skills are grouped under one roof, available to counsel people whose needs don't really fall into any of the standard categories.

It wouldn't have to be a government agency but it should have a regular government grant. The Alberta family service associations get funds from three levels of government.

Social workers see many praiseworthy changes in their field, but a common criticism is the lack of integrated planning by the government.

For example, they praise Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy's recent innovation for the Year of the Child, the special Zenith long distance number to report child abuse.

It has been a success at generating a greater public awareness of the problem, but no new staff were added to cope with the huge numbers of complaints.

City looks at sites for housing

The city of Victoria may open up its 4.5-acre Mt. Stephen property and other small parcels of city-owned land for housing development under the provincial government's new low-cost mortgage scheme, Mayor Bill Tindall said today.

He said in an interview city planning officials are studying the land in question and hopefully recommendations will be put to council before the end of the month.

Tindall said the 4.5 acres at Mt. Stephen and Ryan streets is fully serviced and ready to go.

The property could accommodate a mix of 50 single-family and group units.

If council approves the development of the Mt. Stephen property it would open up much-needed lots for those who want to apply for the new low-cost mortgage money.

Premier Bennett announced last week that the government is making $200 million available through credit unions at 9¾ per cent to encourage more building of houses for sale and also construction of rental units.

The mortgage term is three and a half years.

To qualify for the new, low rate, houses must not be started before Tuesday and must be started before June 30 and be owner-occupied by Dec.31.

Housing industry spokesmen in the Victoria area say the time restrictions make it difficult for people to take advantage of the program.

They say there just aren't that many lots available and by the time new lots were properly zoned and ready for building the deadline for the start of construction would have passed.

John Cowlin, a director of the Greater Victoria chapter of the Housing and Urban Development Association (HUDAC), said it would be "sheer good luck" for people to find lots.

He said the program is a good one but only for those who have lots ready for development.

Don Munro, president of Victoria Realty, echoed those remarks saying there is a tremendous demand for lots in the Greater Victoria area.

He also said there aren't that many homes on the market, perhaps about 50.

Meanwhile, Harold Eisner, president of the Vancouver chapter of HUDAC, says the provincial government's new mortgage scheme may slow the sale of homes now available.

He says the program will encourage some housing activity, however, "many of the Greater Vancouver builders, who have homes under construction or in inventory at higher interest rates, are very concerned that the new program will delay the sale of their present units."

$5,500 saving on solar pool

The city could save at least $5,500 a year on its fuel oil with solar-assisted heating for Crystal Pool, Ald. Robin Blencoe said today.

What could be B.C.'s first solar-heated public swimming pool is proposed in a report from the city engineer.

Blencoe, chairman of city council energy conservation committee, said the proposal is a "good deal even at current oil prices. But in a few years oil will be an astronomical price," and the saving on heating will be much more significant.

He said the proposal is the first of a variety of applications for energy-saving to be outlined in his committee's first conservation report to be presented to council next week.

Engineer John Sansom said the capital cost of installing solar collectors on the lower roof of the Crystal building would be $100,000. At current oil prices they would save a minimum of $5,500 annually by producing water to help keep pool temperature at 83 degrees F.

The report said 40 per cent of the city's fuel oil bill is consumed by the Crystal, and that solar panels would reduce this by 6.6 per cent.

Blencoe said the city has made application to the provincial conservation and renewable energy development and demonstration program for a grant covering half the capital cost.

He said later undertakings would consider other sources of funding, including the federal government's alternative energy promotion programs.

Sansom said the collectors would cover 3,000 square feet of area, and would be mounted unobtrusively.

Driftwood blamed

A chimney fire caused by burning wet driftwood was blamed for a $5,000 fire at the home of Duncan M. Flett, 1482 Dallas, at 8:50 p.m. Sunday.

Firemen said the chimney was badly creosoted, the result of incomplete combustion of wet wood used as fuel.

Deputy chief Fred Severson said overheating resulted, setting fire to structural framing set flush with the masonry without an air gap between.

B.C. aid sought for temple

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson today asked the provincial government for technical assistance in the restoration of the city's only Chinese temple damaged by fire last week.

Hanson sent a letter to Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe stating that his ministry has some of the finest museum technicians and conservators in the country.

Investigators believe the fire Friday was started by an oil lamp which ignited embroidered silk tapestries.

The blaze did extensive damage to the altar and ceiling.

Builder wins zoning fight

A B.C. Supreme Court judgment quashing a Saanich rezoning bylaw will allow developers Belvedere Estates Ltd. to construct an office complex on a 1.5-acre Gordon Head property.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer Friday ruled against a bylaw changing the zoning from commercial to residential category and ordered Saanich to pay court costs, the company's lawyer, Terence O'Grady, said today.

Saanich council decided in 1978 to change a long-standing light commercial zoning on the Blair Avenue property after nearby residents opposed owner Belvedere's proposal for a a 30,000-square-foot office-retail complex.

The company claimed the action was discriminatory and launched a petition to quash the bylaw.

Saanich council repealed the bylaw to tighten it up and passed the revised version earlier this year with only Ald. Sandy Noel opposed. Belvedere then filed another petition to have it quashed.

Saanich lawyer Brian Smith told Mr. Justice Dryer council had a right to review and change zoning provided it did not thwart one person.

He said the zoning change affected other limited commercial areas and that the world had changed in Gordon Head between 1964, the year the property was zoned for commercial purposes, and 1979.

The area is now well populated and residents do not want a commercial development in their front yards, Smith said.

The fact that council changed the zoning on several other limited commercial properties at the same time proves Belvedere wasn't discriminated against, he said.

Robbery suspect arrested

Police arrested a 22-year-old suspect in downtown Victoria and charged him with armed robbery after a female impersonator using a butcher knife held up a store and tried to get a free paper from a newsboy Saturday.

A man dressed as a woman in a yellow hat, beige sweater and blue jeans obtained a small sum of money from the 711 Store at Hillside and Douglas shortly before 7:30 a.m.

Just before 3 p.m. at Yates and Broad a newspaper vendor was approached by a person fitting the same description. He later told police the man asked for a paper and when he was refused, pulled out a nine-inch knife to threaten the boy.

Owners of the Sound Hound at Oak Bay Junction report about $1,500 worth of stereo tuners missing after a breakin discovered at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Christmas sales up 12% but stores pushed harder

Victoria stores have reported a 12-per-cent increase in Christmas sales revenues but they had to work harder for it than in previous years.

Many shops had to reduce prices to bring in the customers.

"Normally, stores don't hold sales until January but this year they held them in December," said Wally Pickering, local manager of the Canada Employment Centre.

He said most merchants were satisfied with the final results, although profit margins were lower because of the special sales.

Victoria appeared to be influenced by reports from Eastern Canada that retail sales would be slow this Christmas, he said.

"Merchants responded with vigorous promotions and it paid off for them. They had a good season and the economy continues to be strong for this time of year."

Pickering said the hospitality industry also did well over Christmas. Hotels and motels were full along the Gorge as well as downtown.

"Victoria is a retirement community and many families visited their parents here during Christmas. Some of these visitors stayed in hotels and motels."

Pickering said a survey by CEC information officer Dan Bowes showed that Victoria's economy generally continues to be solid.

Employment levels at Burrard Yarrows Corp. shipyard soared to 700 in December, up from 470 in November, due to major hull repair work on the Star Opal and some refit and fabrication on the new ferry.

Construction activity held up well in December other than normal shutdowns for Christmas. Unemployment in the building trades is down to 20 per cent, after being as high as 35 per cent, but no further improvement is expected before spring.

Real estate sales were strong in December with $11.4 million worth of properties sold through the Multiple Listing Service, up from $7 million the previous December. There were 162 properties sold during the month, up from 107.

However, there were only 259 listings at month's end, compared with 379 at the same time in 1978.

Lumber markets are expected to be good during the first half of 1980 but plywood markets are soft.

Loggers had a long vacation because the Christmas layoff was followed by heavy snow.

Agriculture is at a low ebb. About 60 jobs were filled through the CEC's farm labor office in December, some of them for greenhouse clean-up.

Only 24 people are employed in maintenance work at Oakland Fisheries and no increase is expected until the herring roe season begins in March.

NEW FUEL SAVER is a redesigned steel-belted radial tire being tested at Avon Tyres plant in Wiltshire, England. A number of design changes could save the average motorist 90 litres of fuel each year. Extensive tests on the Turbosteel Mk 2 also show an improvement on wet surfaces. The tires are used on Rolls-Royce and British Leyland vehicles as standard equipment.

Potash sales jump 19.7%

SASKATOON (CP) — Sales by Saskatchewan potash producers during the first five months of the fiscal year which began July 1, 1979, were up 19.7 per cent over the same period a year earlier.

Statistics from the Potash-Phosphate Institute of Atlanta, Ga., show Saskatchewan mines sold almost 3.5 million tons of potash during the period compared with about 2.9 million tons a year earlier.

About 818,000 tons were sold in offshore markets compared with about 771,000 tons the year before and 2.6 million tons sold in North America compared with about 2 million tons in 1978-79. The gains represent increases of 6.2 and 24.7 per cent respectively.

The statistics show that November sales were up by 22.7 per cent compared with the same month a year ago. There was a decrease of 5.9 per cent in the amount of Saskatchewan potash sold to offshore customers in November but it was more than offset by an increase of 36 per cent in sales to North American customers.

Carter's tin sale draws Bolivia ire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bolivia, protesting against President Jimmy Carter's decision to sell 35,000 tons of U.S. tin reserves, has asked for an emergency meeting of the Permanent Council of the Organization of American States.

Bolivia's ambassador to the organization, Gonzalo Romero, called Carter's action economic aggression.

He said it will cause Bolivia to lose $60 million to $100 million of its exports earnings.

The ambassador said this loss would be sustained as Bolivia is striving to deal with major obligations in its foreign debt and the Bolivian peso's relation with the dollar.

He said the U.S. action would have a social and political impact that could hurt the democratic process only recently taking effect in Bolivia.

On Jan. 2, over the objections of several major tin exporters, Carter signed legislation authorizing the domestic sale of the tin to try to eliminate a tin surplus from U.S. strategic reserves.

Officials said at the time that tin has been in short supply in the United States and the price has risen from $1.68 per pound in 1973 to the current price of $7.90.

They said the domestic tin sale will be held during a three-year period in an effort to maintain stable prices.

TD bank predicts inflation increase

TORONTO (CP) — Higher wages and increased crude oil prices will mean a slight increase in inflation this year, the Toronto Dominion bank forecasts.

The winter edition of the bank's quarterly Canada's Business Climate expects an average increase of 9.8 per cent in the consumer price index, compared with 9.1 per cent in 1979.

The bank says the gross national product — the value of all goods and services in the country — will increase about one per cent this year, compared with 2.7 per cent in 1979.

Only business investment is expected to be a significant source of growth. The bank says it shoud rise by six per cent in real terms.

Unemployment is expected to rise to 8.3 per cent from 7.5 per cent in 1979.

After-tax incomes should rise by 10.8 per cent, but personal savings will decline.

The growth of the labor force will drop marginally to 2.8 per cent from three per cent, but job creation will decline to about two per cent from four per cent in 1979.

The bank expects the Canadian dollar to remain weak in the first half of the year, but improve to about 88 cents U.S. in the second half, reflecting favorable energy developments and declining U.S. interest rates.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rolled up a broad gain today in a busy session marked by strength in oil issues.

Aided by buying on the part of investing institutions, the Dow Jones industrial average climbed almost 30 points last week in the busiest trading week ever at the NYSE. Some of that activity evidently persisted Monday.

In the economic news, there were reports that threatened cutbacks in sales of oil by Iran posed a diminishing threat to the world oil-supply outlook.

Among actively traded oil stocks, Texaco was up 1½ to $30½; Exxon gained ⅝ to $53; Standard Oil of Indiana 1 to $77¾, and Phillips Petroleum ½ to $49¼. Phillips raised its quarterly dividend from 35 to 45 cents a share.

Merrill Lynch rose ⅜ to $22. The shares of the largest U.S. securities and brokerage firm benefited from the recent surge in market activity.

London

The Financial Times index was up 13.1 to 448.3.

Soaring silver key problem

NEW YORK (AP) — Silver has become so valuable that the companies making photographic film save all the little bits they punch out of 35-millimetre and movie film so the film fits on the sprockets.

"They're much too valuable to throw away," Henry Kaska, a spokesman for Eastman Kodak, says of the little punchouts.

The price of silver, a key ingredient of both film and the paper on which pictures are printed, is soaring.

That is pushing up photography prices, and people in the industry are worried there will be a lot fewer folks lining up to say, "Cheese!" for shutterbugs.

"People are going to be reluctant to buy a roll of film," predicts John Lauer, a vice-president of Fotomat. "Instead of buying four or five rolls a year, they'll buy two or three."

A year ago, silver cost $6 an ounce. This month the price touched $40 before settling at more than $30, so prices are rising for both film and paper.

Kodak's increases, ranging up to 75 per cent, take effect Jan. 26 for film and a month later for photographic paper. There is little doubt that other makers will follow Kodak, which dominates the industry and is the price leader.

Amateur photographers can take heart in the fact that color film uses less silver than black-and-white, so the percentage price increases are smaller. The cost of color film is rising between 15 per cent and 25 per cent.

A 12-exposure roll of Kodacolor II color print film, size 110, which cost $1.76 in October, will rise to $2.15 from the current $1.86. And the Kodak charge for developing and printing the pictures will climb to $5.70 on Feb. 26 from $5.46.

A roll of 35-millimetre Kodachrome slide film with 20 exposures will have a suggested retail price of $3.69, up from the current $3.07 and from the $2.90 price that prevailed in October. And on Feb. 26, the Kodak price for processing the film will rise to $3.40 from $3.15.

Instant film uses even less silver than regular color film. Prices of Kodak instant film rose just 10 per cent. Polaroid imposed a six-per-cent increase Jan. 1, blaming it on increases in all costs, not just silver.

The photo industry has long since taken steps to recover every ounce of silver it can. Kodak says it recovers 20 million ounces a year, but still has to buy 50 million more.

One place a lot of silver can be reclaimed is in film processing. Lauer estimates that Fotomat will recover silver worth $10 million in 1980 if the price of silver averages $40 an ounce.

Industry research has cut the amount of silver in film but has been unable to find an acceptable substitute. "There's no other material that has yet been found that can match silver's capacity in reacting to light," said Kaska.

By WILLIAM GLASGALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street is viewing the photo industry with mixed feelings. Analysts cite rising prices for silver and petrochemicals and point to slowing consumer demand. But they're not willing to back off from the industry entirely.

"Be prepared for bad news when final quarter results are released in early February," the Value Line Investment Survey said in its latest assessment of industry giant Eastman Kodak Co., whose shares have slipped from a high of 66⅞ to the upper 40s during the past year.

With "wallets thinned by the steep rise in the cost of basic necessities," consumers have been "sharply paring discretionary spending, including outlays for all types of photographic equipment," the advisory service said.

"It is difficult to make a case for higher earnings in 1980," said Bache Halsey Stuart & Shields Inc. of instant-photography originator Polaroid Corp. Polaroid shares fell to the mid-20s from a 52-week high of $56 (U.S.).

But "as we look past 1980, we expect the photography industry to grow" at an annual rate of 10 per cent to 12 per cent, says Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Instant-photo camera sales are seriously lagging behind other product areas, and "studies show that a larger portion of instant sales have been to minority groups, the sector most impacted during recessions," Bache said.

For 1980, Polaroid is forecasting it and Kodak will sell eight million instant cameras, up from the 7.2 million Merrill Lynch estimates were sold last year, and down from sales of 8.8 million in 1978.

The Polaroid forecast for 1980 is as much as one million units above Merrill Lynch's prediction of instant-camera sales and may be "on the optimistic side," the brokerage house says.

In addition, the soaring price of silver — a vital film component whose value is up by more than 400 per cent in a year — is forcing film prices higher.

In that regard, Polaroid is lucky. Bache says Polaroid bought substantial quantites of silver for $6.25 to $8.25 a troy ounce last year, anticipating sharp sales gains.

Sales "haven't been what management thought they would be," says Value Line, and the company now has a low-priced silver stockpile. But, notes Bache, Polaroid "will eventually have to go back into the market," where silver now sells for more than $30 an ounce.

Value Line says despite the introduction of a new film and the expected unveiling of a new camera line, Polaroid's 1980 profit gains are likely to be slim at best.

Frantic futures trading growing in volume

By KAREN W. ARENSON
New York Times

NEW YORK — Nowhere has the frantic trading in gold and silver been more evident than at the Commodity Exchange Inc. — better known as the Comex.

Deep within the World Trade Center, 386 Comex traders in their shirtsleeves or brightly colored jackets crowd closely around each other, shouting and waving their arms as they buy and sell millions of dollars of metals contracts each day.

The exchange bills itself as the largest metals-futures exchange. Some of its members go further, saying it has turned New York into the biggest metals-trading center in the world. It is virtually impossible to measure the trading volume in London or Zurich, which are ordinarily thought of as centers of gold trading. But last year the Comex handled 12.9 million contracts, mostly in metals, for commodities valued at nearly $512 billion. That was more than 20 times the volume of 10 years ago and 45 percent higher than in 1978.

"This is big business now," noted Lowell Mintz, who, at 41, is the youngest elected chairman the Comex has ever had. He recalls days in 1960, when he joined the Comex, that he did not execute a single order or make a single trade all day, and the exchange itself traded fewer than 100 contracts. A seat on the exchange moved from a high of $50,000 in 1977 to a high of $190,000 last year, although this week a seat sold for $122,000. "The exchange has become part of the financial community," he explained.

All of this business has meant a great deal of money for the Comex and its members. But it has also placed pressures and demands on the exchange that are unlike any it has ever before experienced. The latest crisis has been the buildup in holdings by a few large interests, causing concern in the industry and in the government that the market might be subject to manipulation by just a few people. In an emergency action this week, the Comex moved to limit positions to correct that problem.

All futures markets are used mostly by dealers and holders of commodities who want to hedge against price changes, and the Comex is no exception. A silver-futures contract on the Comex, for example, would permit a buyer to contract for the delivery of 5,000 troy ounces of silver at some time in the future at a specified price. If the price of silver rose in that period, the value of the contract would rise and the buyer would make money; if it fell, the holder would lose money. The reverse would be true for a contract seller. In most cases however, both buyers and sellers close out their positions before they mature.

GM mum on $2B growth plan

MONTREAL (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. is investing $2 billion in Canada, but its plans don't include an aluminum casting plant sought by Quebec, according to company president F. Alan Smith.

The Quebec government has wooed General Motors and other car-makers to establish a casting plant for lightweight aluminum engine blocks, but Smith said it's not in the cards for the time being. The investment program covers the period from 1979 to 1982.

Asked where the $2 billion in investment was going, he declined to give specifics or even to say where in Canada the money would go. All he specified was that at least 3,300 new jobs would be created.

Smith said about two-thirds of GM's Canadian production is exported, mostly to the United States. But some 80,000 cars and trucks will also be exported to South America, the Middle East and Europe.

GM assembles more cars in Canada than it sells here, Smith said, but what he didn't mention is that a heavy proportion of parts is imported from the U.S., giving Canada a 1979 deficit estimated at more than $3 billion in auto trade with her southern neighbor.

Questioned about this, he said the U.S.-owned auto giant keeps Canadian suppliers in mind, but he was vague as to whether Canadian auto parts manufacturers could expect a bigger part of the action.

Despite a weak U.S. market that has led to lay-offs of 40,000 North American auto workers, the Canadian auto industry had another record sales year in 1979, showing a one-per-cent rise with car sales of more than 1 million and truck sales of nearly 400,000.

Smith predicted Canadian car and truck sales for the 1980 model year would again top 1.4 million, with GM selling nearly half. GM accounted for 42 per cent of Canadian sales in the 1978 model year, 47 per cent for 1979 and 49 per cent in the last several months.

But higher fuel costs mean fewer people are buying light vans for personal use and small car sales are stretching the industry's ability to meet demand.

The average 1980 GM car will go 75 per cent further on a litre of gasoline than the 1974 models, and fuel efficiency will continue to increase, Smith said. But he added that many drivers are still willing to pay the fuel bills for larger, more comfortable cars.

GM will continue to produce its larger model cars in Canada, he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. housing industry, long considered an advance indicator of general economic trends, has taken a nosedive recently.

The commerce department reports sales of new single family homes plunged 13.5 per cent in November.

Sales of existing homes are also down sharply — they fell about 11 per cent in November, the National Association of Realtors reported.

Both reports laid much of the blame for the big slide in housing sales on moves by the Federal Reserve Board in early October which tightened credit and forced up interest rates.

In some areas mortgage interest rates reached 14 per cent. In others where state usury law set a limit on how much could be charged for a mortgage loan, many lenders simply have not been lending because it is not profitable to do so.

MORE THAN PRAYERS were needed Sunday by Vitas Gerulaitis, who drops to knees after losing point to Bjorn Borg in final match of $400,000 Grand Prix Masters tennis tournament at New York. Gerulaitis couldn't handle Swedish star and went down to 6-2, 6-2 defeat. (AP laserphoto)

Moscow (AP) — The Soviet Union, angered by Western calls for a boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics, has launched a counter-attack against "cold war troubadours" trying to keep foreign athletes at home.

In recent days, Soviet Olympic officials and the national newspaper, Sovetsky Sport, have warned that any attempt to boycott the Games is destined to failure.

Sovetsky Sport struck out in particular Sunday at U.S. president Carter, whom it accused of "intending to use sport as a means of political blackmail."

In his television speech on Jan. 4, Carter raised the prospect of boycott of the Games by U.S. athletes or tourists because of Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan.

On Thursday, Vladimir Popov, the first deputy chairman of the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee, accused adversaries of the Games of "denigrating" preparations for the Olympics and trying to get a boycott started.

"This is not the first such attempt," he said in the newspaper Izvestia. "And all such previous attempts have flopped."

Meanwhile, Soviet officials are going ahead at full speed with preparations for the Games and for heavy news coverage.

Organizing committee authorities signed an agreement Friday with the Asian Broadcasting Union for television coverage in a series of Asian countries, adding to a long list of already-signed accords that should bring TV coverage of the Olympics to two billion people around the world.

The construction of all Olympic facilities is to be completed by March 15, and officials say they will meet that target.

Sovetsky Sport carried a long list of quotations Sunday from national and international sports officials in a score of countries denouncing calls for a boycott by "cold war troubadours" and the "politicization" of the Olympic Games.

The Soviet Union has supported bans on South Africa in world athletics but has insisted that the Olympics be free of political involvement. Moscow intends to welcome the Chinese and Israeli Olympic teams here this summer, despite the Kremlin's hostile political relations with both countries.

The Sovetsky Sport article struck out in particular at the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp., whose Russian-language broadcasts to the Soviet Union have included coverage of boycott calls.

The article indicated possible Soviet concern that citizens here were being led by such broadcasts to believe that a boycott is a serious possibility.

Oilers, Jets make top clubs suffer

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers and Winnipeg Jets broke out of lengthy slumps Sunday night at the expense of teams perched in much loftier climes of the National Hockey League.

The Oilers, winless in their previous six games, edged Buffalo Sabres 6-5 in Edmonton. The Jets, who hadn't won in nine games, defeated Los Angeles Kings 5-3 in Winnipeg.

"It was a physical game, the kind I'd like to see our guys play every game," said Edmonton coach Glen Sather.

Edmonton now has a record of 10 wins, nine ties and 22 losses for 29 points, leaving the Oilers 19th over-all out of 21 teams. That's not much to compare with Buffalo's second-best over-all league total of 59 points but the Oilers broke out of their shell by outshooting the Sabres 33-25.

Winnipeg, which had lost yet another game the previous night, improved its record to 13 wins, five ties and 26 losses for 31 points, placing the new NHL entry 17th over-all. The Kings, leaders of the Norris Division wih 48 points, arrived in town from Minnesota where they'd handed the North Stars only their second loss of the season at home.

But like the Oilers, the Jets outshot their opponent — 37-29 — and recorded an upset.

In other games Sunday, Boston Bruins defeated Colorado Rockies 6-2, Chicago Black Hawks edged Detroit Red Wings 3-2 and Philadelphia Flyers played to a 1-1 draw with St. Louis Blues.

Asked how his club has managed to score 13 goals against the defence-minded Sabres in the two games the teams have played this season, coach Sather was lost for an explanation.

"That's one of the mysteries of sports."

Stan Jonathan scored three goals as the Bruins beat Colorado and former coach Don Cherry for the first time in three meetings this season.

Grant Mulvey scored a pair of power-play goals, raising his season's total to 23, and Rich Preston added another to lead Chicago to the win.

Reggie Leach's shorthanded goal gave the Flyers the lead at 10:11 of the first period but the Blues tied it up eight minutes later when Mike Zuke beat Pete Peeters.

Killanin says 'no' to switch of games

DUBLIN (AFP) — The 1980 Summer Olympic Games will not be switched to Montreal, Munich or anywhere else, Lord Killanin, International Olympic Committee president said in an interview published in the Sunday Press.

"When the IOC gave the Games to Moscow the American Olympic committee were strongly in support," he recalled. "We do not go back on our word. In any event it would be physically impossible."

Killanin was commenting on suggestions that the Games should not be held in Moscow because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Killanin said he does not believe in the use of sport for political purposes, "whatever ones views."

'Happiest guy in town' as New York jinx broken

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'm the happiest guy in town," said a beaming Bjorn Borg, and with good reason.

Borg, the spectacular, stoic Swede, extended his mastery over Vitas Gerulaitis with a lopsided 6-2, 6-2 victory Sunday in the final of the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters, breaking a New York jinx and reaffirming his status as the best tennis player in the world.

"I was very eager for this one," said Borg, who has beaten Gerulaitis, his friend and practice partner, in all 15 of their meetings. "I've never won a big title in New York. I've wanted to win here for a long time. I've been close so many times, it feels great to finally win."

Borg has never won the U.S. Open, and called that "my next goal — very, very important to me."

Meanwhile, he pocketed $100,000 for winning the eight-man event at Madison Square Garden that serves as the championship of the Grand Prix circuit. If there was ever any question about who is the best men's tennis player in the world, Borg answered it.

"The money is great, but I prefer the title," said Borg. "To win the Masters was very important. I have to put this title very high, because the best players in the world were here."

And Borg beat them all. One by one they challenged, and one by one they fell by the wayside — Roscoe Tanner, Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and finally Gerulaitis.

"He's on a plateau by himself," said Gerulaitis. "You can't compare any of these guys to Borg. He's been the dominant force in tennis the last few years. He's obviously not unbeatable, since some guys came close this week. But he's definitely a little bit ahead of all the other guys."

Sunday's final was decided in the fifth game of the first set. With the score tied 2-2 and Gerulaitis serving, Borg's brilliant passing shots began to take their toll. Gerulaitis struggled to maintain control, sending the game to deuce nine times and saving nine break points. But, finally, Gerulaitis hit a volley into the net, giving Borg all the opening he needed.

At the age of 23, Borg is now up on top of the tennis world. And he's going to fight to stay there.

"It's more difficult to stay on top than reach the top," he said. "The top is very small. There's always pressure on you."

McEnroe, who lost a third-set tie-breaker to Borg in Saturday's semi-finals, earned third prize of $40,000 when Connors defaulted because of a pulled groin muscle. McEnroe also teamed with Peter Fleming to win the doubles title, and $40,000, for the second straight year.

Connors earned $30,000 for finishing fourth, Tanner and Harold Solomon picked up $20,000 each and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and Jose Higueras of Spain won $13,000 apiece.

Cats rebound to clip Blades

Times News Services

Victoria Cougars rallied for two third-period goals Sunday night to defeat Saskatoon Blades 3-2 in Western Hockey League action at Saskatoon.

It was the third straight win on the road for the Cougars who defeated Billings Thursday and followed with a 6-2 win over Medicine Hat on Saturday.

Portland Winter Hawks kept pace, two points behind the Cougars, with a 4-3 overtime win over Regina Pats in Regina.

Barry Pederson scored the eventual winner for the Cougars at 13:42 as the Cougars capitalized with a two-man advantage. Dan Deschenes also scored in the third period while Bob Jansch completed the attack for Victoria.

Saskatoon, which has lost eight consecutive games, was assessed 12 of 19 minor penalties and the clubs split two majors.

Both goaltenders were outstanding as Victoria's Kevin Eastman blocked 41 drives and Saskatoon's Ron Loustel turned aside 32.

In other games, Lethbridge defeated Billings 4-3, Medicine Hat downed Calgary 7-5 and New Westminster Bruins defeated Seattle 6-4 at New Westminster.

Eastern division-leading Calgary has lost three of its last four games while Medicine Hat has lost just twice in its last 10 outings.

Niemeyer, Lacheur win district curling honors

The third year proved lucky for Ruby Niemeyer of Victoria Curling Club at Juan de Fuca Curling Club Sunday.

Niemeyer, who got her first real taste of competitive curling with Canadian seniors champion Flora Martin, skipped her rink to the District 8 championship Sunday with a 9-6 victory over clubmate Carol Rowe in the A-B final of the double-knockout competition.

It was Niemeyer's second win over Rowe. On Saturday she had captured the "A" final by a 9-8 margin.

Niemeyer and her rink of third Tere Batters, second Lea Corke and lead Donna Sundstrum will now compete in the provincial championship at Prince George, beginning Feb. 1.

This marked the third year that Niemeyer had been on her own after previously playing with Martin.

Martin was also in this competition and was eliminated by Rowe 7-4 in the "A" semi-final Saturday and then by Sanders 9-6 in the "B" semi-final Niemeyer's victory also marks the first time the South Island area has had a district championship of its own. Previously there was only one zone on the Island. Now there are two.

Niemeyer got a big break and a big jump with five on the first end and, although Rowe gave it a good try, the closest she could get after that was 8-6 with a steal of one in the eighth.

Niemeyer got that one back in the ninth and then ran Rowe out of rocks in the 10th.

For the second year in a row a rink from Oak Bay captured the girls' District championship which was played in conjunction with the women's event.

Lana Lacheur, who played second in 1979 for District champion Sherri Bath, skipped this year's Oak Bay foursome to the championship with an 11-9 extra-end victory over Kerry Randle of the Racquet Club in that A-B final.

Like Niemeyer, Lacheur also started with five on the first end.

But she had to make a takeout on her final rock to get the verdict as Randle rallied strongly and stole a single on the 10th to force the extra end.

Lacheur defeated Dianne MacLean of Esquimalt 6-4 in Saturday's "A" final while Randle defeated MacLean 12-2 in the "B" semi-final.

Curling with Lacheur were third Colleen World, second Janice Wilson and lead Maureen Okell. Okell also curled with Bath last year.

In the Zone 5 championships at Qualicum, Barb Parker of Comox qualified for the provincial tournament with a last-end 6-5 victory over Sandy Cuthbert of Port Alberni.

Parker scored two in the 10th for the win. She won the "A" side Saturday.

The Tracy Keizer rink of Powell River (Jean McPhee, Gayle Cummings and Leah Needham) earlier captured the District 5 girls' championship with a win over Sandy Smith of Duncan.

Lacheur and Keizer will represent the Island in the provincial girls championship at Tsawwassen Feb. 12-17.

Self control saves Spinks

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Leon Spinks, the former world heavyweight boxing champion, says a new-found "self control" saved him from going down in a second-round barrage by Alfredo Evangelista of Spain to rebound Saturday with a fifth-round knockout.

Spinks sent Evangelista to the canvas for the count in the fifth round of their scheduled 10-round bout. Spinks caught Evangelista with a hard, roundhouse right behind his ear, leaving the Spaniard vulnerable for the final barrage.

South stars best

South got the best marks from two South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League all-star games.

South, composed of players from Saanich Braves, Oak Bay Trios and Esquimalt Legion, battled North, a team of players from Fuller Lake Flyers, Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking and Juan de Fuca Gulls, to a 6-6 deadlock Sunday at Pearkes Arena.

On Saturday, South tumbled the North squad 11-5 at Cowichan Valley Recreation Centre.

Marty Irvine scored three goals to lead the South on Sunday. Tracy Patterson, Irvine and Brown each scored twice for South on Saturday.

In a league games tonight at 8:15, Baird's tackle Gulls at Juan de Fucca Arena.

New look to Island tankard final

By BILL WALKER

It will be a complete set of new brooms from the South in the Vancouver Island men's Labatt's Tankard curling playdowns at Campbell River, Jan. 25-27.

And the brushes from the North will also have a different look as playdowns were completed on two fronts at the weekend and a whole crop of new names popped up.

Four rinks which weren't there last time, and have never been there as rinks — although some may have competed individually — won out in the South Island at Glen Meadows while the four North winners from Port Alberni also sport a new look.

The South representatives are Brad Clarke of Playland and Al Frame of the Racquet Club from "A" side and Tim Horrigan of Victoria Club and Jim Gallaugher of Playland from "B".

Clarke defeated one of last year's reps, Keith Dagg of Victoria Club, 9-4, in one "A" final from the 28-rink competition Sunday morning, while Frame defeated Horrigan 9-6 in the other.

Horrigan got back in the Island fight with a 9-4 win over Jim Dangerfield of Playland at night by stealing four successive points on the sixth through the ninth ends after breaking a 4-4 tie with a single in the fifth.

Jim Gallaugher scored a three in the seventh and then drew for the winning point with last rock in the 10th against Dagg's counter to hand Dagg his second playoff defeat.

For Clarke and Frame, it is a bonus.

Two chances are better than one and now they each have two chances to qualify for the eight-rink Pacific Coast Curling Championships at New Westminster Feb. 1-3.

First, they may qualify out of the Island at Campbell River, where two Zone 1 reps will be determined;

And second, they each have a chance for the one place remaining from the Totem bonspiel by virtue of their high finishes in that event.

However, if either (or both) win at Campbell River they will not be eligible for the Totem playoff.

Two favored rinks which were in last year's Island final and didn't make it, were those skipped by Steve Skillings of Victoria Club and Bob Gallaugher of Playland.

Skillings went out early Saturday, losing to Don Matheson of the Racquet Club 8-4 and Bob Hawkes, also of the Racquet Club, 8-5.

In the North playdown at Alberni, the qualifiers were the Wright boys, Bert and Gary, from Duncan; Neil McDermid of Campbell River and Al Browett of Powell River.

Bert Wright and McDermid won "A" side berths, Wright defeating Browett 10-7 and McDermid downing Joe Cyr of Port Alberni 4-3.

Browett bounced back to capture a "B" event berth with a 10-7 victory over Steve Williams of Duncan while Gary Wright handed Cyr his second defeat in a final, 5-3.

Successful return

TORONTO (CP) — Jane Youngberg of Surrey completed a successful weekend at a national badminton tournament Sunday, sharing in the women's doubles crown a day after winning the women's singles title.

It was an impressive return to competition by Youngberg, 31, a veteran of international play who had taken time off last year to have a baby.

Canada edges Japanese squad

TOKYO (Reuter) — Ron Davidson scored a goal only 51 seconds after the game started to give Canada a 1-0 victory over Japan in a hockey match Sunday.

Portland Buckaroos, cheered on by Victoria fans who recognized some familiar faces, captured the "A" division title by outclassing defending-champion East Kootenay 5-0 during finals of the Pacific Cup Oldtimers hockey tournament Sunday at Memorial Arena.

Norm Johnson, who played in the old Western Hockey League with Brandon and Calgary before playing 61 games with Boston Bruins of the National League, and Cliff Schmautz scored two goals each to lead the Portland attack. Andy Hebenton, who played right wing for the old Victoria Cougars in the WHL from 1950 to 1955 before going on to a distinguished career with Bruins and New York Rangers in the NHL, added the single.

Jim McLeod recorded the shutout in the Portland goal, making several key saves on close-in shots while his clubmates chalked up 3-0 and 4-0 period leads.

Other Portland faces familiar to fans of the old Cougars were Bill Saunders, who scored 31 goals for Victoria in the 1960-61 season; Arnie Schmautz, Cliff's brother who scored 22 Victoria goals in the 1959-60 season; and Jim "Red Eye" Hay, who played for Victoria from 1958 to 1961.

Portland utilized superior positional play, stick-handling and skating to dominate the game and help kill off several penalties.

In the semi-finals, Portland dropped Calgary 5-2 and East Kootenay downed Spokane, 5-3.

Al Grier sparked the Victoria attack with three goals, Al Bodiou added two and singles were contributed by Brian Andrew and Wayne Hunter. Bob Goth (2) and Cliff Main replied for Lances.

Athletics reached the final with a 3-2 win over Brass Rail while Lances blanked Port Akberni 2-0 in the other semi-final.

Fort Erie, Ont., earned the Labatts Challenge Cup for being the least penalized team in the tourney.

George Stuart, the ticket marketing chairman, said the tourney was a financial success for the third straight year it has been held in Victoria.

"The fans in Victoria have certainly supported it," he said.

A total of 1,480 players made up the 76 teams in the tourney and 1,252 guests accompanied the various squads.

Stuart estimated that approximately 15,000 people attended the games, which were held over three days at all the Victoria-area arenas.

Can halt baldness Finnish scientists say

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists said they have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The product contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hairs and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Alan Jones, skillfully manoeuvring his Williams car over crumbling asphalt curves, overtook three rivals after a pit stop to win the Argentine Grand Prix by 25 seconds Sunday over the Brabham of Nelson Piquet.

The opener of the 1980 Formula I driving competition was a battle against heat and a deteriorating track that forced all but seven of the 24 starters to drop out with mechanical failures — most of them with jarred suspension systems.

Gilles Villeneuve, 27, of Berthierville, Que., escaped injury when he crashed his Ferrari while battling for the lead. He completed 36 laps and was placed 12th in official results.

Jones, 33, an Australian who won four Grand Prix races last season, called the Buenos Aires Autodrome circuit 'diabolical' and said he was lucky to win. His time was the slowest for the 315-kilometre race since 1973 — one hour, 43 minutes and 24.38 seconds. He averaged 183 km. an hour.

Finland's Keijo Rosberg, in a Fittipaldi racer, trailed Brazilian driver Piquet by 54 seconds and outduelled the Tyrrell of Northern Ireland's Derek Daly by five seconds for third place. They were the only three drivers on the last lap when Jones finished.

Bruno Giacomelli of Italy finished fifth in an Alfa Romeo and Alain Prost of France was sixth in a McLaren.

Argentina's Ricardo Zunino, a lap behind in a Brabham, was the only other driver running at the end, as the four previous winners of this race — Jacques Laffite, Mario Andretti, Jody Scheckter and Emerson Fittipaldi — led the host of retirements.

Drivers had complained during qualification trials Friday and Saturday about broken asphalt on the track. They agreed to race Sunday after the surface was repaired, but the asphalt crumbled and became slippery in the 104-degree heat. All escaped injury.

The drivers already have voiced concern about the safety of the Interlagos track at Sao Paulo, Brazil, where the Formula I competition resumes Jan. 27.

Hope lead shared

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Craig Stadler shot a three-under-par 69 Sunday to move into a share of the lead with Larry Nelson in the Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament, which was being concluded today:

Eric Heiden smashes own world record

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Eric Heiden of Madison, Wis., the reigning world all-round and sprint speed skating champion, smashed his own world 1,000-metre sprint record with a time of one minute, 13.60 seconds Sunday during an international meet.

Heiden also bettered the world mark for sprint points, posting 150.255 points over the weekend meet in two 500 and two 1,000-metre races. The previous record of 151.190 was held by Evgeny Kulikov of the Soviet Union.

Soviet skater new champ

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — Natalia Petrusheva of the Soviet Union won the first three races and placed sixth in the final 3,000-metre event Sunday to dethrone Beth Heiden of the United States as the world all-round women's speed-skating champion.

Heiden finished second, more than a time point behind the 24-year-old Soviet skater. Bjoerg Eva Jensen of Norway captured third place in the over-all standings after winning the 3,000 metres final in track record time. Former all-round champion Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg placed sixth over-all.

Heiden set the old track record last year when she won all all four races and beat runner-up Petrusheva by more than 2.5 points.

Burka said she will concentrate on the 1,000 and 1,500-metre races when she and the other two members of the Canadian team here — Kathy Vogt of Winnipeg and Brenda Webster of Regina — join the other members of the Canadian squad in Davos for the Swiss championships next weekend. These will serve as Olympic trials for the Canadians.

After winning the 500, 1,500- and 1,000-metre races, Petrusheva settled for sixth in the 3,000. Heiden was second in this race and Sarah Doer of the U.S. was third. Burka placed seventh.

By winning the 3,000 meters, Jensen overtook Sylvia Filipsson of Sweden in the over-all standings. Filipsson placed fourth, followed by Sabine Becker of East Germany and Burka.

Sunday's comptition was staged in foggy, cold weather with temperatures around -12 degrees.

Petrusheva, who had clinched the title by winning the the three first races, had a final score of 179.046 to 180.163 for Heiden and 180.922 for Jensen. Filipsson scored 181.136, Becker 182.028 and Burka 182.065.

The other two Canadians entered here, Vogt and Webster, did not qualify for the 3,000-metre final and therefore did not figure in the final points standings.

Saturday, Petrusheva won the 500 and 1,500. Sunday, she won the 1,000, followed by Hensen, Heiden and Burka.

The International Skating Union rules state that a skater who wins three of four races at international championships automatically is the over-all winner as long as the final fourth race is completed.

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (AP) — Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein followed the example of his sister, Hanni, and took the lead in the men's World Cup standings Sunday by winning a slalom at the 40th international Hahnenkamm ski races.

He now leads in the overall Cup standings with 110 points. His sister tops the women's list with 172.

Wenzel's winning time for the two heats was one minute, 41.10 seconds. Christian Neureuther, 30, of West Germany finished second in 1:41.78 with Jacques Luethy of Switzerland third.

Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, the defending World Cup slalom champion, trailed badly after the first heat. He had caught his left ski in a gate pole and freed it with an acrobatic feat. With a late starting number he schussed down the second heat to finish with a total time of 1:43.08 for a 13th-place tie with Gustavo Thoeni of Italy.

Yugoslavian slalom ace Bojan Krizaj, who finished fourth in the slalom in 1:31.94, moved to third place in the standings with 75 points.

TRAX 12

NEW TRAX 12
ALL SEASON RADIAL
from
Firestone®

With the new all season TRAX 12 from Firestone, you're through changing tires as often as the seasons. The revolutionary multi-purpose tread of TRAX 12 will eat up just about any driving condition the weatherman throws at you. Plus you get the ride comfort and road-handling stability you expect from radial tires. TRAX 12 is a polyester radial – strong, flexible and impact resistant.

Put a set of TRAX 12 radials on your car today. Then let the sun shine, the rain pour and the snow fall.

TRAX 12 is the weather-teasing, owner-pleasing, all season radial from Firestone.

SPRING
Your TRAX 12 has open shoulder slots to channel water out the tread when driving on rain-soaked roads. This greatly reduces hydroplaning and provides better contact between your tires and the road.

SUMMER
The computer designed tread pattern of your TRAX 12 has a dividing center rib to keep your tires running quietly, even at highway speeds on hot summer roads.

FALL
The roads may be dry and hot one day and snow covered the next. That's okay. Your TRAX 12 radials may be better prepared for sudden changes in the weather than you are.

WINTER
Your TRAX 12 has tapered shoulders and interlocking deep groove lateral Z-bar cleats for positive traction in mud and snow and slush.

Vikette zone press does in the Dinnies

University of Victoria's first-place basketball squads both completed two-game sweeps over the University of Calgary rivals during Canada West University Athletic Association action Saturday at the McKinnon Gymnasium.

Vikettes applied an effective zone press in the second half and dropped Dinnies 73-56 in women's play while the Vikings topped the Dinosaurs 85-79 in men's action.

Vikettes, who extended their CWUAA record to 8-0 and picked up their 22nd straight victory of the season, trailed Dinnies 30-29 at half time before using the zone press.

Carol Turney-Loos, the league scoring leader, padded her season total to 218 points while leading the Vikettes with 33 points.

In other women's league games, Lana Simpson scored 20 points and Pam Mann added 10 to lead University of Lethbridge Lady Pronghorns to a 50-46 victory over the host University of Saskatchewan Huskiettes and Alberta clipped UBC Thunderettes 68-49.

Bill Loos scored 19 points, Reni Dolcetti added 18 and guard Eli Pasquale chipped in 15 while anchoring the defence as the Vikings improved their conference record to 6-0 and an over-all mark to 18-5.

Calgary slipped to 3-3 within Canada West despite Fred Koepke's 17 points in the second match.

In other men's contests, Pronghorns defeated Huskies 98-80 and Alberta Golden Bears bounced UBC Thunderbirds 76-67.

VIKETTES (73) — Carol Turney-Loos 33, Luanne Hebb 10, Sandi Lewis 4, Sue Shaw 13, Tracy McAra, Cindy Smith 6, Jane Boe, Donna Digby 5, Karen Packalen, Janine Prince.

DINNIES (56) — Jenny Woods 2, Judy Mayba 4, Cathy Keenan, Lindy Rasmussen 6, Dori McPhail 11, Julie Hendrix 6, Jane-Anne Kosten, Donna Hanna 6, Lori Chizik 6, Janis Paskevich 16.

VIKINGS (85) — Reni Dolcetti 18, Billy Loos 19, Gerald Kazanowski 9, Ted Anderson 9, Eli Pasquale 15, Chris Hebb 7, Kelly Dukeshire 8.

DINOSAURS (79) — Romel Raffin 10, Mark Jorgenson 2, Steve Atkin 15, Karl Tilleman 12, Scott Stevenson 6, Paul Babcock 2, Fred Koepke 17, Eric Duerkson 15.

Greenwood rallies for squash victory

Mike Greenwood of Victoria staged a comeback Sunday and captured men's "A" class laurels by defeating Tim Bale of Vancouver 4-9, 7-9, 9-4, 9-7, 9-0 in finals of the Vancouver Island invitational squash tournament Sunday at the Sussex Club.

Scott MacInnis downed Graham Cunningham 8-9, 9-6, 10-8, 9-2 in the "B" final; Dave Cowan topped Bob Ballinger 5-9, 6-9, 9-5, 9-3 in the "C" final and Dave Berry bounced a woman entrant, Sandy Drever, 8-10, 9-5, 10-9, 9-0 in the "D" final.

In consolation finals, Julian Greenwood tripped D'Arcy Laurence 3-1 ("A"), Gerry Poulton downed John Penner 3-1 ("B"), Neil Rawnsley tumbled Malcolm Anderson 3-2 ("C") and Keith Watson dropped Don Shillington 3-2 ("D").

In women's action, Maureen Johnston of Duncan defeated Cindy Brown of Vancouver for "B" laurels and Vivian Irving blanked Brenda Bulmer 3-0 for "C" honors.

There were no "A" entries.

Tourists tripped by Tide

The Junior Crimson Tide defeated New Plymouth Boys' High School 19-12 Sunday at Royal Athletic Park after the Palmerston North Boys' High School team had mauled University of Victoria Jutes 38-8 Saturday.

The teams battled to a 9-9 deadlock at half time but the Tide's superiority in the forward line helped produce the win after the break.

Mark Pinkard kicked five penalty goals to lead the Tide attack and Terry Cambridge went over for a try. Rodney Milne counted the New Plymouth points on two penalty goals and two drop goals.

The Tide maintained possession most of the match by winning a majority of balls in both loose and set play.

On Saturday, Palmerston proved a little too disciplined for the Jutes at UVic and led 20-4 at halftime.

Mike Holmes ans Ted Beck each scored a UVic try.

Duran back in KO swing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Knockout artist Roberto Duran, who hasn't scored a knockout in more than a year, got back into the swing of things Sunday by stopping Joszef Nsubuga of Uganda in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round fight.

Duran, whose record went to 68-1 — with 54 knockouts — owned the fight from the outset and in third and fourth rounds punched Nsubuga at will.

With only seconds remaining in the fourth round, Duran put Nsubuga down with a right cross. The Ugandan, fighting out of Norway, took an eight count, but staggered back to his corner. It was obvious he didn't know where he was.

Referee Richard Green checked Nsubuga and stopped it. The bell had rung when Green signalled the end, but it was recorded as a fourth-round knockout.

Duran, 146½, of Panama, the former world lightweight champion, received $65,000 for his appearance from Caesars Palace. The Ugandan got $10,000.

It was the first knockout for Duran since Dec, 8, 1978, when he knocked out Monroe Brooks in the eighth round of a scheduled 10-rounder in New York.

Duran was lightweight champion at the time, meaning his kayo Sunday was his first in four fights since renouncing the 135-pound title because of weight problems.

The fight was a tuneup for Duran, who wants a shot at World Boxing Council welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard sometime this year. He also could get a shot at World Boxing Association champion Pipino Cuevas, but the big money fight would the one with Leonard. Duran is the WBC's No. 1 contender.

Nsubuga, who was ranked 10th by the WBC, now is 15-2, with eight knockouts.

Bullets blast UVic Grads

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Ken McKenzie scored 28 points Sunday to spark Fraser Valley Bullets of Burnaby to a 101-82 win over University of Victoria Grads Sunday in the championship game of a senior men's basketball tournament.

Jan Bohn added 21 points for the Bullets, who led by 30 points at halftime.

Victoria advanced to the final Saturday by beating defending-champion Crest All-stars of Prince Rupert.

Opening lead — ace of spades.

If you make a phony bid in an effort to mislead your opponents, there is always the chance you may wind up fooling partner and cause your side irreparable damage. But on lucky days a wild shot sometimes pays off, which is exactly what happened in this deal from the world championship match between Italy and Brazil in 1969.

Forquet and Garozzo were North-South for Italy when the bidding went as shown. Garozzo was understandably confident of making a slam in clubs if he could stop a diamond lead, and he decided to bid two diamonds over one spade in an effort to inhibit a diamond lead.

Probably Garozzo's leap to six clubs should have silenced his partner, but North obviously did not recognize the two diamond bid as merely lead-inhibiting and he corrected six clubs to six diamonds.

This contract did not appeal to Garozzo at all and he ran to seven clubs, which East doubled after two passes. The double conventionally barred a spade lead and offered West the option of leading a diamond or a heart, depending on his hand and how he construed East's double.

But the Brazilian West, for reasons best known to himself, trotted out the ace of spades — though he should have known from the bidding that the ace would not survive.

As a result, Garozzo wound up making the grand slam for a score of 1,630 points, instead of going down three — 500 points — which would have been his lot had West led the queen of diamonds instead. All of which goes to show that it's much better to be lucky than clever!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Tuesday, January 15, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dreams come closer to being real; distances diminish, you communicate, travel, publish. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. What was a "lost cause" can become a stepping-stone towards goal. You have a "revelation!"

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get results of recent efforts, investments. Be sure rules are not changed in middle of game. Means protect your interests—get valid appraisal, accounting. Partnership proposal should be put on "back burner."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message—be positive of terms, definitions, legal commitments. Partner or mate commands attention—and deserves it. Time is on your side. Know it and refuse to panic. If single, spotlight could be on marriage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Obtain hint from Gemini message. Maintain moderate pace—keep resolutions and medical-dental appointments. Apparent employment setback is temporary. Family member lends moral and financial support. You'll win!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Roadblocks to contentment, happiness fade. You have chance now to make up for lost time! Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles. Emphasis on creative changes, intensified relationships, bright sayings of children.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You know where you stand—sense of direction is regained. You may be deleriously happy, but you will be more secure. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Older individual gives you significant vote of confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give full rein to intellectual curiosity—make inquiries, be analytical, seek reasons, locate sources of adversity and success. Member of opposite sex lends moral support. Trips, messages and relatives form montage as part of busy scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Authority, responsibility, money and love are featured. Cancer, Capricorn natives figure in scenario. You collect what you need—and you will get money's worth. Major domestic adjustment is on agenda.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cycle high, define terms, assert needs, views—be confident because you will be at right place at right time. See situation as it is—be realistic enough to eschew self-deception. Moon position highlights initiative, independence, fresh starts and valuable contacts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You extricate yourself from intolerable situation. Take responsibility for your own actions. Refuse to be a "victim of circumstances." Older individual, temporarily confined to home or hospital, might play key role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than begin—tie loose ends, fulfill long-standing obligation. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Accent on friends, hopes, wishes, added prestige due to a correct business or career decision.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New approach brings desired results. Emphasis on ambition, authority, gaining green light for independent action. Leo, Aquarius persons figure on scenario. Member of opposite sex asks for a more "total commitment."

IF JANUARY 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have distinctive voice, a "sweet tooth"—you are a combination diplomat and fighter. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. January and October could be memorable months for you in 1980, a year in which you define goals and streamline procedures. You learn how to deal with a very "sensitive" situation or relationship. You are a persuasive, attractive individual who could sell any product which features design, comfort and luxury. You will be rid of a burden in February.

"We got the cookies, Mom," said Susan, as her brothers followed her into the kitchen. "Nice ones at 8 cents and 13 cents, all for $2.40."

Karen looked. "Fine, but no more for you today," she declared. "I see you've eaten half of them already."

She was right, so how many had they bought?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: Cheque for $33.61.

Mr. Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

Fighting a way of life for Afghans

By LEON DANIEL
United Press International

Adolf Hitler praised the black-eyed Afghans as the first noble Aryans and his picture still can be found in mud huts there. But he never got to rule Afghanistan.

Neither flattery nor terror has subdued Afghanistan permanently and today's Russian invaders might ponder the words of a former U.S. ambassador to Kabul, Robert Neumann: "Foreign invaders have found it much easier to march into Afghanistan than to march out."

Beautiful long-haired Afghan hounds and deep red Afghan rugs are not typical of this harsh and violent land. Other stereotypes are closer to reality — the fierce Pathan tribesmen, the vicious climate, the miserly soil.

Ice and granite peaks reaching to 20,000 feet in the Koh-i-Baba and Hindu Kush mountain ranges funnel bitter winds across mile-high Kabul, the capital. In winter much of the country is covered in snow — but the typical lean, turbaned tribesman, bandoliers crossed over a floppy shirt and armed with daggers, usually walks through it in open-toed sandals.

Afghanistan is landlocked, strategically important and tough. It is 75 per cent desert, 12 per cent farmland, 10 percent pasture and 3 per cent forest. Most of its 20 million people — 2.5 million of them Nomadic tribesmen — are trapped in grinding poverty.

In summer temperatures reach the inferno point at places like Kandahar, where the Americans built a huge air base which now is being used by the Soviets.

Fighting is a way of life for Afghans and almost every man who can afford one owns a rifle. Many were constructed by hand in mud huts and are serviceable copies — right down to the serial number — of weapons made in sophisticated factories in the West.

Anyone who doubts the country's capacity for violence should remember that its last three leaders were killed in coups.

But in addition to fighting each other, Afghans over the centuries have battled all types of foreigners.

In 330 B.C., Alexander the Great conquered the country, then part of the Persian Empire, and in the 19th century the British Raj and Imperial Russia played out the so-called "Great Game" in Afghanistan, the stakes being control of the Western Himalayas, which the British saw as "the garden wall of India."

The first British-Afghan War, 1838-42, featured an epic British retreat from Kabul which a single white man survived.

Foreign traces are evident even in the hats Afghans wear, ranging through the Middle East fez, Cossack-like fur hats to turbans in the style of the Indian subcontinent.

Many faces have the straight noses and angular features of the Aryan race; but some are clearly Turkish and others even show a hint of Mongolia.

The food is no less complex. Indian spices liven up a dish that in any other country would be called ravioli, all of which is topped by yogurt made from goat milk.

The conquerors' influence is evident in language. Fifty per cent of the population speaks Pushtu, which has a distinct ring of the proud tribesmen of Pakistan, and 35 per cent converse in Dari, a Persian dialect almost identical to Iran's Farsi. There are Turkic languages and at least 30 other minor tongues.

The Afghans converted to Islam in the 9th Century and today 99 per cent of them are staunchly Moslem, though there are tiny Jewish communities.

Only 12 per cent of the population is Shiite, the branch of Islam whose best known leader is Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran, Afghanistan's oil-rich neighbor on its western border. The great majority of Afghans are Sunni Moslems.

The United States and the Soviet Union, vying for influence in the 1940s and 1950s, poured considerable aid into Afghanistan, building most of the asphalt roads.

Along these roads — including the famed Khyber Pass from Peshawar, Pakistan, to Kabul — trek trade caravans of camels carrying goods such as raw opium and hashish as well as television sets. Kabul got color TV in mid-1978.

ON APPROVED B.C. HYDRO FINANCING

CHECK THESE NEW BENEFITS AND OPTIONS FOR AUTOPLAN '80

Autoplan
1980

It's getting close to renewal time for Autoplan insurance. The deadline is February 29th for the majority of B.C. motorists.
Although rates are up by 10% because of increased costs, individual premiums may increase or decrease because of changes in ICBC's rating structure and the introduction of Phase I of the F.A.I.R. program.
Your Autoplan insurance for 1980 also features some new built-in benefits for everyone and some new options you should consider for your personal protection when you renew.

CHANGED COVERAGES

1. INCREASED LIABILITY COVERAGE
Like everything else, the cost of settling bodily injury claims continues to rise. So, for your greater protection, we have increased the compulsory minimum for Third Party Liability insurance to $100,000 from $75,000. For the nine out of 10 motorists who carry more than just the minimum coverage, there will be no extra cost.

2. INCREASED NO-FAULT ACCIDENT BENEFITS
Recognizing the higher cost of living, a number of no-fault accident benefits are being increased.
- Weekly benefits increased to $100 from $75.
- Dependent benefits increased to $25 from $15 a week.
- Funeral expenses increased to $1,000 from $750.

3. SAFE DRIVING VEHICLE DISCOUNT CHANGE
A major change in the discount program came into effect last September. It waives the earlier requirement that drivers in British Columbia had to be insured under Autoplan for six months before they became eligible for a Safe Driving Vehicle Discount. Now, the discount can be applied without the waiting period and it is based on the owner's previous claim record. A one-year claim-free record earns a 15% discount; two years earns 25%; three qualifies for 32½%. This change principally benefits people buying an additional vehicle and new residents to the province.

NEW COVERAGE

INVERSE LIABILITY COVERAGE
In some U.S. states and Canadian provinces, your right to recover costs for damage to your vehicle through the courts is legally prohibited when a resident of that state or province is at fault in the accident. This new Autoplan feature, which is included as part of your basic coverage at no extra cost to you, provides for payment of your collision damage cost to the extent that you are not at fault for the accident.

NEW OPTIONS

1. UNDER INSURED MOTORIST COVERAGE
For an additional premium you can now extend your protection to cover accidents where the insurance of the driver at fault is not sufficient to cover claims for bodily injury and death. If you are the victim of an accident, and you carry this option you are protected to the limit of your own Third Party Liability coverage.

2. SUPPLEMENTARY NO-FAULT ACCIDENT BENEFITS
If you feel the current disability and death benefits offered under the No-Fault Accident Benefits schedule are insufficient to cover your needs, this option allows you to buy a higher level of benefits for an additional premium.

AND THE F.A.I.R. PROGRAM STARTS

Autoplan '80 will also introduce Phase I of the F.A.I.R. program. The premium you pay may be affected by one or more of these changes:
- Sex and marital status will be removed as rating factors. This will mean a decrease of about 30% in the average premium paid by male vehicle owners or principal operators under 30 years of age.
- The first step will be taken towards removing geographical location as a rating factor. As a result, premiums will increase in some territories and decrease in others.
- The Safe Driving Incentive Grant will be discontinued because the young, single, male drivers who received this grant will benefit more from the new lower premiums
- An additional premium is no longer required for an occasional operator under 25 years of age.

If you have any questions, consult your independent Autoplan agent, or your Motor Licence Office. Be sure to pick up your Motorist Kit when renewing your insurance. It contains a handy pocket to protect your insurance and registration documents, useful information if you have an accident and details of Autoplan insurance for 1980.

Renew early and take time to discuss the new coverages and your requirements with your agent.

Life may begin at 40 for some folks — but for Martha Anna Nichols it began at 80. That's when she started jogging. Now, at 83, the Atlantic City, N.J., grandmother has added motorcycles, camping, a piano and a bit of old time religion to her repertory of life. She still dons her yellow sweatsuit and white sneakers for her daily mile-and-a-half run, but she admits her plunge into things spiritual was a bit scary. Her grandson introduced her to a church, and, says she, "I knew what they were teaching was true, but it took a while to be baptized. I'm scared of water you know — nearly drowned in the ocean twice." And that just could signal scuba diving lessons.

Caroline

A Paris court Thursday ordered the French magazine Photo to pay Princess Caroline of Monaco $20,000 damages for publishing topless pictures of her without permission. The court dismissed a charge that photographers had invaded her privacy in taking the pictures, but said the magazine had violated her exclusive rights concerning the use of her image.

The British mother who caused controversy nearly 30 years ago by giving her infant son to former Hollywood sex symbol Jane Russell, was found murdered in her gutted London apartment. Authorities said they believe Florence Kavanagh, 53, who lived alone, was strangled and her apartment in the south London district of Clapham set on fire to hide the slaying. She was last seen leaving a Clapham tavern with a man.

King Carl Gustav of Sweden will visit Rhode Island in August to watch the Swedish 12-metre yacht Sverige compete with three other entries in preliminary America's Cup races.

President Josip Broz Tito met with Yugoslavia's second-ranking political leader, the state news agency Tanjug reported, apparently to show that he is still well and active. The 87-year-old Tito is reported suffering from problems with blood vessels in his legs. Tito has been secluded in a Slovenian mountain residence where he met with a U.S. heart and circulatory specialist, Dr. Michael deBakey, and Soviet cardiovascular specialist Dr. Marat Knyazhev.

Dear Abby:

May I comment on your confidential to "should I give in?". You responded with this sad refrain:

"When I met him, I liked him.
When I liked him, I loved him.
When I loved him, I let him.
When I let him, I lost him." — (Author Unknown)

That might have been true once, Abby, but not today.

I know many girls (now women) who "held out," and were left out. I am a living example — and a very bitter one. I believed that holding out was the way to get a man, but I lost a number of good men to other women who met their needs for a "total relationship" (sex). Now these women are happily married and are righteous pillars of our community, while I spend nights and weekends alone. Now I'm too scared to try a sexual relationship; all I can do is fantasize about one. (I only wish I had some real memories.)

I know this has no chance of being printed since you need to protect your point of view. Why do you perpetrate such nonsense?

Dear Held Out:

"Letting" a man is vastly different from being a party to a mature love relationship — one in which each gives equally. To "let" someone is to allow yourself to be used.

Have no regrets for not "letting" yourself be used. Regret only having passed up a mature love relationship playing instead that childish game of holding out, thinking that was the way to get a man.

I don't know your age, but you are never too old for a sexual relationship if you want one.

Dear Abby:

I am part of a triangle. All three of us are in our 60s.

I have been in love with this man for nearly 30 years. He loves me, but his wife will not give him a divorce — or at least that is what I have been told all these years.

I have no social life, and very little family life because I've wanted to be available when my sweetheart found an hour for me.

Nobody talked me into anything. I made this choice a long time ago, and I wasn't a child then.

Perhaps I'm in a sentimental mood tonight (he's on his way to see me at this very moment), I am playing "our records" on the stereo, the wine is chilling, and the old excitement is still there.

Half a Loaf

Dear Half:

It's your life, and I'm glad you're happy. Not everyone can make a banquet out of somebody else's crumbs.

But man is the deadliest killer of them all

It is no secret to knowledgeable up-Islanders that our cougar population, if you will excuse a villainous pun, is growing by leaps and bounds. Thereby hang several tales, and as a connoisseur of cougar stories, I propose joyfully to pass them on to you.

First, there was the startling experience of a woman who lives a few properties down the highway. Her house is reached by a winding drive, which ends at the edge of the woods.

Late one recent evening, our subject tooled her car up the drive, swung it around the corner of her carport, and from the side of her eye, caught a flicker of movement in the shadows.

As the car completed its half-circle, its headlights swept away the gloom. The lady clamped a foot on the brake and sat staring, not quite believing what she saw.

This was a large cougar, which sat saucy as you please in the angle between house and carport, gazing at the homeowner with a calm gooseberry eye.

At this point, I interrupted with a question. "Were you scared?" I asked.

"Oh, no," she answered. "After all, I was perfectly safe in my car. We sat looking at each other for a while, then the cougar turned and disappeared in the woods."

The only precautionary action this calm lady has taken is to keep her dogs close. When a cougar takes to haunting human habitations, it is almost invariably lured by the presence of dogs and cats, which it proceeds in methodical fashion to vacuum up.

But the cougar's preferred diet is deer meat, which leads us into my second account. This bears on another woman, also in a car, upon whose vision burst an astounding sight.

She was driving down the highway in broad daylight when, approximately level with our house, a doe deer came bouncing out of one of the cross-road lots. While the driver was slowing to digest this spectacle, a cougar followed in hot pursuit. Deer and cougar ran down the road for about 50 yards, then the deer veered off into a spruce-grown lot above the beach, and the pair was lost to sight.

Such a chase is by no means typical cougar behavior. Usually if puss misses her initial charge, the intended prey goes free. But not at all typical, either, was the experience that befell my friend Harry while he was deer hunting with a friend late-on in the season.

Harry is a matter-of-fact, almost phlegmatic man with a habit of under-statement, who takes it as all in the day's work that he should augment his family's meat supply with his rifle in season.

How'd you make out last trip?" I asked Harry when he stopped by for coffee.

"Not too bad," he said. "Got a nice little two-spike buck, and a young cougar."

"What did you do with the cat?" I asked.

"Ate it," Harry said. "I never tasted better meat." He paused, then added dryly, "For a while there, it was a case of who was going to eat who."

"You don't mean a cougar jumped you?" I asked.

"I sure do," Harry said, "I've been hunting all my life and never dreamed of anything like that happening. Certainly not to me!"

The attack occurred only a few yards from the camp where Harry worked, close to a road which he travelled unarmed and on foot each day.

Harry and a friend had set out after deer when they were flagged down by a driver coming from the opposite direction.

Harry and his friend saw no sign of the cat. They separated, spreading out to enfilade the road. Behind him, in heavy cover, Harry heard a minor rustle. At the same moment, his partner winged an urgent yell at him.

"Harry! Look out!"

Harry swivelled around to see a cougar soar out of a brushy trough straight at him.

He threw up his rifle, a re-stocked military .303-calibre, and fired. The cougar plowed earth almost at his feet.

It was a young beast . . . one of a pair, the hunters deduced, since they heard the plaintive calling of another cat nearby. Chased off by its mother, no doubt, and too green to have learned that man is the deadliest killer of them all!

HILARY GROOS doesn't complain about gas prices in her native Victoria — and since eggs cost nearly $1 for a half dozen where she has been living, it isn't likely food costs here worry her too much, either. For Hilary's story and her fascinating world perspective, see Elizabeth Forbes' column today on page 22.

Body English spoken here

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — If you want to prove your body can speak just as convincingly as your voice, Ken Cooper has a test for you.

"Just for fun," he says, "go home and approach your wife with a wide smile and your arms outstretched, and scream into her face in an angry voice, 'I love you!'"

Cooper is a specialist in nonverbal communication, the language of the body. He analyzes how people convey their true feelings by the way they pose themselves — or try to cover up their true feelings the same way. Virtually everyone communicates in body language, Cooper said in an interview.

"Even the Ayatollah Khomeini is amazing in the type of things he does," Cooper said. "I call him the Persian Darth Vader, the epitome of all the evil guys who have ever lived.

"On his television interviews, he didn't even acknowledge that the interviewer was there. He had no direct eye contact. He has very sinister-looking eyebrows. He whispers, like Marlon Brando, which is very commanding. If you and I whispered like that, we'd bore everybody to death."

Cooper has written a book titled "Nonverbal Communication for Business Success" in which he applies his techniques to the business world. But body language can be used in any situation.

To help interpret what others are saying, Cooper developed a five-point body survey. It takes into account the position of someone's head, hands, legs, general posture and what Cooper defines as "the center," a point right at the breastbone.

Cooper said the concept of the centre indicates most vividly how people feel about themselves. A chest thrust out indicates aggression, he says, while a slouch suggests diffidence. A wide-open centre, with hands spread apart, is a much more inviting attitude than a negative, closed-off approach.

But interpreting nonverbal communication isn't as easy as going down a checklist and putting the pieces together. Cooper cautions against making broad generalizations based on one particular trait. He also says body language should be used to make matters more open, not to hide the truth.

"Controlling your body language or changing it to something you are not is almost impossible. I can do it, but I'm a professional. Most of us are not good enough actors to do it.

"My point is not to control your own body language, but to help you read others. When I lecture, I like to call on people before they raise their hands. I'll point to them and say, 'Do you have a question?' They'll be halfway through before they realize they didn't volunteer."

Cooper was trained as an engineer, but he got out of school during what he calls "the great engineering depression of the 1960s" and became a salesman for IBM. He heard a talk on body language, began to study it more fully, then decided to lecture full time.

Nonverbal communication affects all areas of life — business, the dating game, especially politics. Cooper has photographs of the 1976 debates between Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford, showing a smiling Carter using open hand gestures while a no-nonsense Ford is gripping the podium with white-knuckled hands.

First impressions are important, Cooper said, and the right body language can help.

"If I walk into your office, I'll shake your hand, then step back and break the contact. I'll sit down, put my briefcase on the floor and adjust my suit while you can give me the once-over without my looking.

"Giving you the chance to check the press of my pants or the shine of my shoes at the beginning means I have a better chance of getting you to listen to what I say later on. This is especially important for women going into the office of a man."

Woodpecker inspires brain studies

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

The frontiers of science never cease to be amazing. Thousands of dedicated scientists devote their lives to finding barely perceptible fragments of information in the hope that these will furnish leads to better health and the longevity of mankind.

A fascinating scientific study was performed by Dr. Philip May, at the University of California School of Medicine. He and his colleagues found that the head motion of a drilling woodpecker may lead to better ways of protecting the human brain from injury.

Using high-speed films and computer analysis, the woodpeckers' neck and head were studied while they were drilling into trees. The secret of the birds' immunity to brain damage, despite repeated sharp blows with their heads, may have been discovered.

It seems that the straight-hitting path of the head and the absence of rotation of the neck diminishes the dangers of the sudden impact caused by blows to the brain.

It is felt that this information can be translated into methods of saving the lives of boxers and players of contact sports. It is suggested that helmets worn for impact protection should be thick and light, with a two-layer, form-fitting inner padding. An inner spongy layer would absorb the energy of impact and a harder outer layer would distribute the impact force evenly.

Dr. May says, "More than just the helmet protecting the head is necessary to protect against brain impact damage. Restraints that minimize rotary movements and whiplash movements are also necessary. A person facing an imminent impact injury should tighten the neck muscles and hold the neck flexed in a chin-down position, to minimize possible brain damage."

It is to be hoped that some of the severe damage in boxing, football and other contact sports will eventually be minimized by the scientific contribution of the adorable woodpecker.

Melted paraffin is another way of bringing heat and comfort to people suffering with some forms of arthritis. Hot compresses, heat lamps, hot baths and diathermy also seem to relieve the spasm of pain in the muscles and the joints.

It must be remembered that the melted paraffin can cause severe burns, unless used properly.

None of these modalities should be used without specific instructions.

Keep a sizeable length of old garden hose in your car and you might get out of a sticky (muddy) or slippery (snowy) situation much easier. The old hose can be stretched back and forth in front of two tires for better gripping, said the country gentleman.

Count lamps and other lighting fixtures in your home and you know the numberof light bulbs eventually needed as replacements. Count on paying at least 70 cents each when you buy a pack of two most common wattage bulbs. You might save a third of that cost by buying part of a case lot at a lighting fixture store. Some such stores discount bulb prices (by, say, a third) when you buy 48 same-wattage bulbs. Too many? Share the bargain with a neighbor.

Many of us learned at Christmas not to add batteries to a battery-powered gift which won't be unwrapped for at least a day. "Off" switches can be jiggled "on" and a battery's power is gone within a few hours. If you like, install the battery but do not connect it to the terminals.

She has ocean-hopping habit

Commuting back and forth across the Atlantic, between Canada and western Europe, has been a way of life for Victoria's Hilary Groos, during the past four years.

Home during the holiday season to visit her mother, Mrs. David Groos, and for a reunion with a brother and two sisters and their families, she explained some of the reasons for these goings and comings.

It started at the beginning of 1976 when an application she made through a program that allowed graduate students to work as temporary help with certain international organizations, was accepted and she was assigned to the North Atlantic Assembly in Brussels.

When she arrived staff there were preparing a history of the assembly and she helped with research and wrote several chapters for the book.

The appointment was supposed to be for six months but Miss Groos was there for nearly a year.

That was followed by a jump back to Ottawa and an opportunity to do research and secretarial work in the office of a member of Parliament.

Next came a move to France to brush up on the French language at the Sorbonne in Paris, where she stayed for almost a year.

At the end of that time she went back to Brussels as a local employee with the Canadian delegation at NATO, until she was accepted and could transfer to the defence planning and policy division of the international secretariat at NATO.

With that appointment Hilary Groos became a permanent member of the international staff with the privilege of working for any NATO organization and in any NATO country.

She has also been fortunate in still being able to join the North Atlantic Assembly for its annual meetings, to travel with it to Paris and Lisbon and back across the Atlantic to Ottawa and Williamsburg, Virginia, and to act as a liaison, at times, between national delegations at those meetings and NATO.

Quite recently Miss Groos moved to a new position with the visits section in the information directorate attached to NATO's department of political affairs.

This directorate has full responsibility for keeping people in all NATO countries fully informed.

Letters are directed to it, with questions from political leaders parliamentarians, students, diplomats, interested women's groups, individuals, journalists and member of the media.

"We write back suggested dates for a visit and we set up a program around the specific needs," Miss Groos explained.

When a group or an individual wants to contact other international organizations arrangements are made for them, with ample time for discussion.

Care is also taken to keep delegates of the various countries concerned informed as to what is happening by sending on to them copies of letters in which they might be interested.

"Some groups and individuals will be coming for their seventh year," Miss Groos said.

"Most of them are from England, the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany or France.

"However we do have a group of teachers from Canada who visit once a year and there is a group of Canadian mayors who have been over more than once."

Members of the international staff are well paid and there are many extra privileges, but that doesn't compensate for the high cost of living over there, Miss Groos said.

"People complain here because gasoline (regular) is around 25 cents a litre," she pointed out. "I pay 85 cents for the same amount over there.

"Then I buy a half dozen eggs I hand over the equivalent of $1 Canadian and on top of a rental fee for the telephone in my apartment, there's an extra charge for every call I make."

"As well it costs $100 Canadian to have that phone connected and if it had to be installed, the charge would be $200.

"There is also a compulsory deposit to cover any loss through non-payment of monthly accounts. No interest is added and the only way to get it back is to leave the city."

Despite these and other extra expenses, Hilary Groos describes Brussels as an exciting and rewarding place to work.

As she sees it "with NATO, the Common Market, SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters Allied Power in Europe) and other international organizations established there, as well as the offices of many multi-nationals, and with Brussels within easy reach of London, Paris and Amsterdam, it could easily be named the capital of Europe."

When she flew back to that city last Tuesday she was eagerly looking forward to continuing her work at NATO headquarters and to again being a part of the exciting international scene.

This patchwork design is a real ball

This little person is thrilled as he can be with his 3-D Ball. Made from from leftover bits of fabric, your material costs are practically nil when you clean out your sewing drawers. The beauty of this particular design, which is based on a Victorian pin-cushion, is that you can vary not only the colors, but the fabrics as well to make each one different. Babies and other little children, love textures. Here's your chance to use bits of corduroy, funfur, velvet, satin, velours and knits, as well as calico and broadcloth. Vary the colors too — make them as bright as possible. Each of the twelve padded segments can have different colors . . . very helpful when it comes time to teach color names.

This is a ball which Baby will have not trouble in grasping. It's approximately 20 cm (8") in diameter, lightweight when stuffed with polyester, and completely washable.

This is one time when accuracy of tracing the pattern pieces is essential. Each little section must join perfectly with the others to make the whole. It's fun to make, and a pleasure to give as a gift. The segments are joined together with colorful embroidery thread.

If you need a fund-raiser, these are bound to be a best-selling item. Because of the unusualness of the design, you should have no trouble selling these at a good profit. People marvel at the way they're made. Often they'd rather buy the item than try to make it themselves. All the members of your group could donate their materials.

You can call it a Whirlagig, a 3-D, or a simple patchwork play ball. Whatever you call it, it is a winner in more ways than one.

Happenings: Houston, Texas hosted the first Show and Sale for the Quilt retailers in the U.S. The show, which featured a super display of over 1,000 quilts from 30 different exhibitors, attracted people from all over. The items for sale included beautiful fabrics, new sizes of quilt batts, marking tools, templates, patterms, stencils, kits, and many, many books. The vast selection of items made it hard to decide where to look first, and illustrated and illustrated the tremendous popularity of quilting. The quilts on display were among those you may have seen in books. Authors, Dixie Haywood, Beth and Jeffrey Gutcheon, Carolyn Lee and Roberta Horton demonstrated their special techniques for everything from Machine Applique to Stained Glass quilt making. The highlight of this event was Show & Tell, which was held in a school. Dozens of quilters got up to show their work of the past few months. The oohs and aahs competed with the sound of flashbulbs popping. There were medallion quilts, batik quilts, applique quilts, patchwork quilts, stained glass quilts, children's quilts, and miniature quilts. At the Show & Tell I was amazed at the number of people who held up their absolutely gorgeous quilts shyly saying, "This is my first quilt."

Why not try quilting yourself — you'll never know your potential until you do. A good way to start is by taking a course or reading a book on the subject.

Teens drop dope

DENVER (AP) — Teenagers today are more conservative than their counterparts in the early 1970s, a recently released survey by Rand McNally and Co. says. Only eight per cent of the 50,000 students included in the Who's Who Among American High School Students said they smoked marijuana or favored living together. By comparison, 27 per cent surveyed in 1972 said they smoked marijuana and favored cohabitation.

Don't die of boredom

In an English country churchyard I read this epitaph: "I am going to do nothing forever".

If that is what heaven is like I think it would be hell.

Albeit this tombstone inscription was on the grave of a poor farmer's wife who had labored beside her husband in the fields, with time out for labors of another sort — giving birth to 12 children. I guess she deserved a rest: but I'll bet heaven itself would soon bore her silly if she couldn's keep busy.

Out of that same England comes this: Too many people die within a year of retiring from Britain's National Health Service (said to be the country's biggest employer). Research shows that one in four persons retiring from the Service at 65 die within six months.

These startling statistics are supplied by David Simmonds, research worker at University of Surrey. These people are dying of boredom.

Simmonds emphasizes this: "When people feel that they no longer are needed — no longer doing something they consider important — they simply lose the urge to go on living. After being involved in a busy, caring profession, they suddenly find they have nothing to do."

He is doing something about this by organizing groups of retired staff in health areas throughout Britain. Groups will be encouraged to develop new skills at technical schools and colleges, travel on special seniors' excursions, form volunteer help units, set up discussion groups and move on to other suitable activities of their own devising.

His campaign to prevent thousands of people from dying of boredom is an organized effort worth noting. But, as I have stressed here before, you can plan your own protection agianst premature wasting away.

Leisure should not be equated with doing nothing. In fact, leisure does not really exist unless it is a break between things that have to be done or should be done. Such chores are "the bread for the leisure sandwich" is the way fellow senior Alan Olmstead puts it; he adds "To find leisure, look for work".

In a recent TV show a bored group of oldsters stole a bus (to cavort for the day at an amusement park) then, liking that, stole a train! Currently playing is a movie ("Going In Style") where three seniors, tired of just sitting on a park bench, rob a bank!

I do not recommend such drastic solutions for your boredom but there are lots of new, legal experiences you can seek out to give meaning to a life you may feel is becoming meaningless.

So don't wither on the vine. Constant loafing is likely to find you soon joining that English lady in the country churchyard.

Film producer pleads guilty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A movie producer who was successfully sued by actress Cheryl Ladd over the use of her name in ads for his adult film, Taxi Girls, has pleaded guilty to offering an undercover policewoman money to perform sex acts in the same film. Jaacov Jaacovi of Hollywood, who entered the plea Wednesday, is the first film producer to be successfully prosecuted on a felony pandering charge.

Male liberation aim of course

TORONTO (CP) — Every Thursday night for a couple of months, half a dozen men work to feel better about themselves.

They call it male conciousness lowering, an awkward term for a process described as a spinoff of the drive in the 1960s and 1970s to raise female conciousness.

"The argument is that women's self-esteem is too low, that they have been taught to nurture and men to be nurtured," said Don Gillies, moderator and executive director of the Toronto Institute of Human Relations.

Gillies, 45, who describes himself as just another guy wondering what it's all about, said his $100, eight-week course explores male relationships with mother and father and areas of interest ranging from man's sense of his own body to jobs and careers.

He said in a recent interview the group's discussions, aimed at liberating the male to his feelings, begin at the core of modern urban man's problem.

"Mother says he's her fair-haired boy. He's going to succeed. He's going to make her proud. So the guy works hard, tries to make his mom, his wife, his whatever, proud and has a heart attack at 40. So what, as long as he's driving for the top.

"The nurturing, the gentle, the poetic, all the so-called feminine aspects of life, he learns to sacrifice as he climbs over others to the top. He learns not to cry, not to show hurt, to be brave at all times."

Gillies said the cost of this stereotyping is awesome.

He said each of the sessions is introduced with five minutes of reading on a selected topic to give the discussion a starting point.

"Next, we have input. We call it sharing, not analysing . . . If someone starts to philosophize — you know, I think everyone should have a friend — then we try to direct it back to the self."

What type of man would discuss such intimate matters with acquaintances of eight weeks? In Gillies's group, there's a television producer, an architect, a sculptor, an economist and a man who came to keep the peace at home.

Dietrich Boecker, 49, a divorced architect who has two sons from a 19-year marriage, describes the meetings this way.

"Basically, out there, you keep up a facade as a man because there is an intrinsic image you are supposed to maintain. Talk to another man and it requires the formality that you play at being equal or better.

"Here, I found the strange thing is that other men, if I talk openly with them, feel the same way as I do. I think it would be good if more of us got off our high horse and learned to be human beings."

An eclipse of the sun takes place when the moon passes directly between the sun and the earth, so that the moon's shadow is cast upon the earth. The moon is able to eclipse the sun due to a curious relationship that exists between the two. The sun has a diameter 400 times that of the moon, but it is also 400 times as far from us. Therefore, from our vantage point, the two bodies appear to be the same size.

A lunar eclipse is produced when the moon enters the shadow of the earth. In an average year, there are two lunar eclipses to every three solar ones.

Trudeau airs five-point party policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau resumes campaigning for the Feb. 18 election in southern Ontario today after making his first major policy statement in Toronto Saturday.

Trudeau is scheduled to speak to university students in London before returning to Toronto later in the afternoon.

The former prime minister said he would flesh out during the remainder of the campaign the skeleton of the party's platform revealed Saturday.

Trudeau announced that a Liberal government would reduce the budgetary deficit and make the tax system more equitable as well as hold down government expenditures.

He also promised not to reintroduce the Progressive Conservative government's mortgage interest and property tax credit scheme and a proposed increase of 18 cents a gallon, four cents per litre, in the excise tax on gasoline.

Trudeau described five main themes in the party's platform:

— Management of the country's finances in a way that makes more effective use of tax money.

— Development of industrial policies to stimulate economic growth, create jobs and increase Canadian ownership and control in the economy.

— Ensurance of prosperity in all regions through economic growth.

— Protection of poor and middle-income Canadians by "helping first those who most need assistance."

Trudeau offered no details of the policies in the face of growing criticism from political opponents over the lack of clear Liberal party alternatives.

He said cutting the Conservative mortgage interest and property tax credit scheme and the increased gasoline tax would bring "justice for our society and more money for the treasury."

The Liberal leader called Prime Minister Clark's campaign promises of government restraint a sham. He said a Liberal government would reduce the deficit but not at the expense of jobs, growth and the attack on inflation.

However, he said the Liberals would not make any specific promises during the campaign because that would be irresponsible.

ELECTION 80

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said Sunday there is little substance to the five point election campaign platform unveiled by Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau.

Broadbent told reporters during a stroll through a crowded flea market there is nothing in the broad policy outline he has not heard before from the Liberal party.

The NDP leader declined to be more specific about the platform, announced Saturday by Trudeau, as he chatted up local merchants and curious shoppers in this city just west of Toronto.

Prime Minister Joe Clark also had a low opinion of the Grit platform.

During a busy one-day swing through Quebec's Eastern Townships — bastion of Liberal and Social Credit suport — Clark ridiculed Pierre Trudeau and the campaign platform he unveiled.

Clark described the five-point platform as "vague and full of generalities" and Trudeau as "the invisible man" — a reference to the low profile the former prime miister has adopted in the campaign.

In Mississauga, Broadbent toured the flea market for about 45 minutes in an appearance designed more for the television cameras than to answer questions from reporters.

He managed to emerge however as Time magazine's Man of the Year after posing for a computer portrait that was superimposed on a poster modelled on the magazine's cover.

When the photographer, who operates a booth at the flea market, told Broadbent he could iron it on his pillow the grinning NDP leader responded, "I'm not sure my wife would like that."

His trek through the market took a comical twist when he turned to shake hands with someone behind him and discovered it was his wife, Lucille.

"Oh hello Ed, have I met you?" she joked. To the delight of cameramen and film crews the couple kissed before moving off.

In Coaticook, Que., Prime Minister Clark told a town meeting the Liberals are offering the nation a leader who plans to resign after the Feb. 18 election and a vague campaign platform incapable of repairing their 11 years of inept government.

Trudeau will not even be around after Feb. 18 to implement his promises should the Liberals win the election because he plans to resign the party leadership, Clark said.

Trudeau announced in November he would step down as Liberal leader but promised a month later, after the Progressive Conservative government fell, to remain at the party's helm for an unspecified period of time.

WINNIPEG (UPC) — Finance Minister John Crosbie spent a rollicking 45 minutes Saturday savaging Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau and defending his defeated budget as "a warm, vivid human document."

To the delight of a crowd of 300 Conservatives attending the provincial party's annual convention, Crosbie punctiliously refrained from using Trudeau's name in deference to the Opposition leader's emphasis on a team approach to politics.

"I won't mention his name because he doesn't want anyone to mention his name," said Crosbie. "He says the leader should be seen and not heard. It's a new principle in politics."

In another foray, he said, "He (Trudeau) says he's taking a team approach." Then, referring to a clutch of retired former Liberal cabinet ministers, he added, "But where is the team? Where is Bob Andras? Where is John Turner? Where is Donald Macdonald? Where is Alastair Gillespie? Where is Otto Lang?"

Feigning indignation, the finance minister said, "He (Trudeau) insulted my mukluks. But I prefer my mukluk budget to a potluck party."

Crosbie denied opposition charges that his budget — which led to the defeat of the government last month — was tough.

"The budget of Dec. 11 wasn't a tough budget," he said. "It was a warm, vivid, human document."

Rhinos told to pay up

MONTREAL (CP) — Four Rhinoceros Party candidates in last May's federal election, as well as their official agents, have been fined $100 each for failing to report their campaign expenses.

Associate Chief Justice James Hugessen of Quebec Superior Court ruled that they had "ignored their obligations, going on their way, just as if the electoral law was only a game."

2,400 attend levee

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of about 2,400 people, including hundreds of children milled through Government House Sunday during the largest annual levee ever held by a Canadian Governor-General.

Such levees are traditionally held sometime between New Year's and mid-January, and this one — their first — was scheduled by Gov.-Gen. and Mrs. Ed Schreyer to coincide with Ukrainian New Year's Day.

The adult guests, including Privy Council President Walter Baker and former Gov.-Gen. and Mrs. Jules Leger, could sample a punch made from 48 bottles of dark rum, 12 bottles of brandy and some fruit juice.

Injured lad to get his wish

CALGARY (CP) — Nine-year-old Cory Gurnsey told his mother from his hospital bed all he wants is a Guy Lafleur hockey sweater to replace the one he was wearing Wednesday when he was stabbed eight times.

"It has to be a number 10 sweater, just like the one Guy Lafleur wears," Laura Gurnsey said from Cory's bedside Saturday.

Claude Mouton, public relations director for Canadiens, said just before the Saturday night game in which Lafleur scored the winning goal against Philadelphia Flyers that the Lafleur will send Cory one of his sweaters and an autographed picture.

Cory was stabbed in what police say was a senseless attack by a deranged man. He was admitted to hospital in critical condition but has been moved up to satisfactory.

S. Sgt. Roy Evans, head of the Calgary homicide squad, said detectives are following thousands of leads and have already interviewed and eliminated 65 persons as suspects.

Ms. Gurnsey said Cory was walking home behind a friend when he was attacked.

2 tires blow as jet lands

TORONTO (CP) — An Air Canada aircraft blew two tires on landing at Toronto International Airport on Saturday but airline officials said there were no injuries.

The airline said the wide-body plane landed hard and both tires in the nose wheel blew.

Air Canada said there would be a full investigation into the incident.

Consulate bombed

MONTREAL (CP) — A small handmade bomb, described by police as "very amateurish," exploded near the front door of the Cuban consulate in downtown Montreal early today, but caused little damage and no injuries.

Montreal police spokesman Charles Poxon said the blast shattered several windows at the consulate and at nearby houses, including one recently purchased by Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau.

An electrical generator outside the unoccupied building was also slightly damaged.

Rhino party candidates blowing their own horns

By KEVIN DOUGHERTY

QUEBEC (CP) — If a Rhinoceros Party government waddled to power in Canada's Feb. 18 federal election, Quebec Nordiques of the National Hockey League would be sent to Tehran to rescue the American hostages.

The party would keep the present Canadian embassy in Tel Aviv and would establish mobile, pre-fabricated embassies in East Jerusalem, West Jerusalem, Gaza, Jericho, Bethlehem and Nazareth.

Yaives Ferland, chairman of the party's "endochrinement committee," explained that these are some of the promises in the official Rhino program.

But at a nomination meeting during the weekend to choose Rhino candidates in nine Quebec City area ridings, one candidate promised to move Jerusalem to Tel Aviv and another pledged he would move Moscow to Jerusalem.

Unlike the backroom boys of other parties who, in the face of this type of political nightmare, would hasten to explain what the candidates "really meant," Ferland said: "We allow total dissidence."

The goal of the party, whose candidates model themselves on the slow-moving, thick-skinned rhinoceros is: "A strong Canada in a united Quebec and a prosperous Alberta," Ferland added.

About 500 turned out for the nomination meeting in a dance hall and beer flowed freely.

In addition to the usual speeches, there were jugglers and clowns and music from a Quebec City band as well as the Rhinoceros marching band from Granby, Que.

Seven of the candidates were chosen by acclamation, while in the other two ridings there were two contenders for the candidacies.

In fierce competition between the two candidates seeking nominations in Langelier and Louis-Hebert, a lane was cleared down the dance floor for a potato-sack race.

They were also put to the test when asked to pin the horn on the rhino, blindfolded, and sent out into the crowd to sell Rhinoceros party badges.

In Langelier, Athanase David took 90 points in the competitions, while Jean (Obelix) Lefebvre had none. The announcement that Athanase (Obelix) would be the candidate in Langelier came as a surprise.

Ferland explained that David and Lefebvre would not be running as two candidates, but as one double candidate.

Lefebvre had an announcement to make to his "Bolshevik adversaries" in the Marxist-Leninist party.

"Stalin is dead," he said.

Raymond (Mo-Mo) Guay in Kamouraska-Riviere-du-Loup said the army should be trained to catch butterflies.

Jean-Marcel (Cretin) Paquet, running in Portneuf riding, asked: "Where is Portneuf?" and promised no more elections if elected.

Paquet also held out the possibility of "three or four" referendums to expand Canada, taking in new provinces in South America, Europe, Africa and the the Soviet Union.

Taking in the Soviet Union would give Canada "21 new provinces — including Afghanistan," he noted.

(Grand) Paul Ste. Croix, in Charlevoix, said a macrame bridge would be built to connect Ile-aux-Coudres with the mainland.

Raymond Pollender, running in Quebec-Est, said in response to the white paper on sovereignty-association by the Parti Quebecois and the "plainer brown paper" of the Quebec Liberals, he had a coloring book on the constitutional debate to offer.

Denis Bernard, Rhino pick for Charlesbourg riding, announced he had no speech to give and asked instead for suggestions from the audience.

Outlook gloomy - poll

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians interviewed for a Gallup Poll released Saturday were far more pessimistic than optimistic about the coming year.

Gallup Poll interviewers conducted surveys with people in 22 countries around the world about the prospects of 1980, and opinion was divided.

In four countries — Korea, Mexico, Venezuela and Uruguay — a majority expected 1980 to be better than 1979, Gallup says. But in four other countries — India, Britain, Austria and the United States — a majority believed it would be worse.

Of the Canadians polled, 49 per cent were pessimistic, while 27 per cent were optimistic.

Interviews were conducted in November, Gallup says, and the results based on approximately 1,000 or more interviews per country.

Gallup says residents of 16 countries were polled on the same question in late 1978, and the latest poll shows that in 10 of those more pessimism is expressed today.

Chopper crash kills 4

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Four persons died about 90 kilometres north of here Saturday when a Bell 206 helicopter owned by Athabasca Airways of Prince Albert crashed into snowy bush, a spokesman at Canadian Forces Base Namao said.

Dead are: Darlene Stolarchuk, 25, of Wynyard, Sask.; Georg (cct) Kohlberg, 29, of Saskatoon; Gary Thompson, 22, of Saskatoon; and, the pilot, Lorne Kucharyshen of Prince Albert.

The three passengers were forestry employees being transported into northern Saskatchewan for tree sampling.

Forces spokesman Capt. Keith Hummel said the pilot may have been a victim of whiteout.

Whirling dancer leaves them crying encore, encore!

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Cries of "Is that all?" "What's happening?" "Encore, encore!" punctuated the persistent applause from a standing audience at the end of the Margie Gillis performance at McPherson Playhouse Sunday.

And when the house lights came up a deep sigh of disappointment accompanied them.

Gillis, the Canadian dancer who has been the subject of media attention across Canada and recently triumphed in a series of performances in China, had given her predominantly young audience approximately 80 minutes of solo dance. And what dance! Like no other seen on a Victoria stage. Well, not exactly.

This city has been presented with many contemporary dance companies in the last decade so by now audiences should begin to know something about modern dance — what it is and why; where it has come from, its direction and meaning.

Alone on the stage through number after number — supported only by sometimes faulty taped music — the strong-boned lithe body arched and spun, writhed and shook, described harsh angles and lyrical curves. Whether she is expressing Johann Sebastian Bach or the blues of Tom Waites' Waltzing Matilda, she is a powerful evoker of images, communicating her own passion from tender to tormented; from a height of gaiety to a well of despair.

Her thigh-length hair swirls about her like a great shawl; her bare feet punctuate the rhythm; her face reflects the spiritual quality and the emotional force she exudes.

This force is the very core of Gillis's art; the burning coal that has been passed on down from the great initiators of modern dance; from Isadora Duncan, Mary Wigman and Hanya Holm through Martha Graham and Katherine Dunham.

The crescendo and climax of the Gillis performance Sunday, the most vivid expression of the power and passion she possesses, came with the awe-inspiring Premonition, choreographed by Linda Rabin to the nerve-tingling music of Phillip Werren.

Successful Investing & Money Management

If you're doing well, you'll do better. Much better.

If the money you're making is slipping through your fingers, we'll show you how to keep it and turn it into the kind of money you thought only a fortunate few could accumulate.

I'M RON HUME, President of Financial Education Services. Our organization has spent five years and several hundred thousand dollars in developing a proven successful method to train people in the art of acquiring wealth. A method that is now revolutionizing the personal investment field.

Men satisfied with accumulating fifty to one hundred thousand dollars are discovering they can turn that into five or ten times as much.

Others, men who had practically nothing to show for all the money they earned, are well on their way to security and financial independence.

Yes, even with today's inflation, higher taxes and the uncertain economic climate, you can significantly increase the money you have available for investing . . . and without taking unnecessary risks, pyramid that money more successfully than you ever imagined possible.

Not For Everyone

BUILDING a personal fortune, then, doesn't take luck. And you certainly don't have to be a financial genius. Acquiring wealth is a process. And like any other process it can be learned.

Which is not to say that the Successful Investing & Money Management program is the answer for everyone.

You'll need a good education. And an above average income. You must be willing to devote at least two hours a week to your own good fortune, and recognize that you can't get rich through anyone's efforts but your own.

With these qualifications, and given your own desire and willingness to put what we say into practice, Successful Investing & Money Management can virtually guarantee your financial independence – and a lot sooner than you might imagine.

Getting Started

THE starting point depends on your current situation. If you're financially secure already, you'll want to borrow, working with other people's money as much as possible.

So, we'll teach you the safest ways to borrow and how to find the best sources for investment capital. You'll learn how to get the most money, at the lowest rates, for the longest terms. You'll even be able to get the money you need from the same sources the giant corporations use.

Regardless of your position, though, the key to your success will be increasing the money you have available for investing from your current income. And this is where "money management" is even more important than "successful investing".

So, we'll show you new and better ways to reduce your taxes. Like a risk-free investment in commodities. The tax reduction you can get will be as valuable as your best investment. What's more, you'll learn from our tax experts exactly how to take advantage of the big-dollar tax savings you've heard about, but probably never knew quite how to use or plan for properly.

Then, if you use certain surprisingly easy inflation beating techniques we'll teach you, you should end up with a minimum of $1,500 to $2,500 extra a year to invest. You'll be amazed to discover the difference just this small amount can make in your assets in a very few years. You can actually capitalize on today's uncertain economy instead of being just another victim.

The Really Big Difference

THE biggest breakthrough, though, will come from learning how to leverage your money – getting far higher than usual returns investing comparatively small amounts of capital.

Of course, every service and newsletter talks about leveraging. Unfortunately, it's almost always talk. With us, you learn the step-by-step procedures to follow. So, returns of 30% – on a completely guaranteed investment – are neither unusual nor particularly difficult to get . . . once we've taught you how.

Then, we'll introduce you to a variety of special situations where you work with other people's money. For example, how to use a margin account to make money on high-grade bonds. You only put up as little as 10% of the money – the rest comes from your broker.

A Case in Point

OF COURSE, for your wealth to really grow, the investments you make – the ones you have – must be shielded from taxes. No easy matter as you've discovered, I'm sure, if you depend on an accountant, broker or financial service for advice.

In fact, I can think of no better or more forceful illustration of the need for Successful Investing & Money Management's safe, sure, protected system for accumulating wealth than the recent newspaper stories that detailed the bilking of thousands and thousands of dollars from doctors, executives, rock and roll and movie stars and even their financial managers by fraudulent land sales operators.

I can understand – as I'm sure you do, too – the need felt by these people with high-paying professions and careers to shelter their income from taxes and find the kind of inflation-proof profit that insures their financial independence.

I can understand it, but I really can't accept the idea of turning full control of your personal financial destiny over to someone else. Not when I know a man of 30 can end up with over a million when he retires investing only $88 a month at 15%.

Actually, if we can't teach you how to make at least 20% on your money – and almost from the moment you begin the course – we'd neither expect nor would we recommend you continue.

So, once you've completed the Successful Investing & Money Management program you won't have to look for those hit or miss schemes or take wild plunges. You'll have the confidence and knowledge you need to be your own investment advisor. And while your way may be slower, you'll get there safely and surely.

Yours Free For 15 Days

OF COURSE, I neither expect nor do I want you to take my word for any of this. Rather, we want you to put us to the test yourself. It will cost you $5.00 and a couple of hours of your time. There's no obligation whatsoever and we'll even return your $5 if you want.

Just fill in and return the coupon below. We'll send you the first two lessons to use for 15 days. Satisfy yourself that the information you get is not available anywhere else at any price. That the successful investing method we will teach you is easy-to-follow, completely practical and self-tailoring.

More important still, with the very first lesson you must be able to develop a map for your future, a formula for financial success that includes (1) a simple system for selecting the investments that are best for you . . . (2) a workable way to significantly increase the money you're going to have to invest . . . and (3) easy ways to increase your return on investment which can have a dramatic effect on your net worth over even a relatively short period of time.

If the course doesn't meet these conditions, simply return the two lessons to us within 15 days of receiving them. We'll thank you for your interest and refund your $5 Registration Fee, immediately. No questions asked.

Could anything be more fair? And could you do less than look – when it could affect your whole future?

No Obligation – Ever

THEN, when you decide to continue, we'll send you an additional two lessons approximately every 3 weeks until the 29-lesson course is completed. (Each lesson takes about three hours to complete, so you'll have plenty of time to complete each one before the next lessons arrive.)

Note, there is NEVER AN OBLIGATION to continue. You can simply stop any time you want.

So, the course works for you or you discontinue it. Which makes us particularly proud of the fact that the vast majority of those who start continue through to the end.

And, surprisingly to me at least, is the high proportion who write to tell us of the pleasure and satisfaction they get from their ability to make big money for themselves. As a matter of fact, their pleasure and satisfaction is almost as important and rewarding to them as the money itself. Just wait until you can do it for yourself.

Surprising Low Cost

PLAINLY, though, the course is designed to speak for itself. To serve you as no other institution can. And to bring you the kind of financial success few men ever enjoy.

Return the coupon below and we'll send you the first two lessons free on our 15-day no risk trial. All we ask is that you include the $5 Registration Fee, which will be refunded if you return the lessons.

When you want to continue, we'll send the remaining lessons at the rate of two approximately every 3 weeks and bill you just $9 (tax deductible) for each lesson you receive. You may, if you wish, use your Master Charge or VISA bank card.

Act now. You have nothing to lose – and you could make a fortune.

Yours Free! $30.00 Subscription to "The MoneyLetter"

WHEN you enroll in the course you'll also receive a four-month subscription to the outstanding financial and investment newsletter – The MoneyLetter – regular price $95.00 per year.

One of Canada's most remarkable financial publications, The MoneyLetter has a proven record of bringing to its readers inside information on all kinds of money-making opportunities . . . immediate, unqualified, unbiased recommendations about how to beat the tax man to the bank and thwart inflation's vicious spiral.

In addition, and at no extra charge, you always have available the assistance of our staff consultants. Your personal counsellor will be assigned to you when you enroll and you are encouraged to seek help with any aspect of your studies the entire time you are on the course.

Your Double Guarantee

GUARANTEE #1 – If within 15 days of receiving the first two lessons you do not agree that the program will actually enable you to build a personal fortune, simply send the lessons back for a complete refund of your Registration Fee – no questions asked.

GUARANTEE #2 – You have the right to drop out of the program at any time and pay for materials only after you have assessed their worth for a full 15 days.

President, Financial Education Services

The Advisory Staff

THOUSANDS have already completed the Successful Investing & Money Management course in the short time it's been available. And while there is NO OBLIGATION EVER to continue taking lessons, the vast majority of those who start continue through to the end.

Credit for this enormously successful program must go to our Advisory Staff. Fourteen financial experts, including Dr. Morton Shulman, millionaire investor and best-selling author of "Anyone Can Make A Million", Charles E. Neapole, former Vice President of the Royal Bank of Canada, and past President of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges. Donald C. Webster, President of Helix Investments and Chairman of the Board of Huxley Institute of New York. Richard A. N. Bonnycastle, Chairman and President of Cavendish Investing. These men working with leading professors and highly acclaimed financial writers, joined together to create this totally unique, completely practical and highly successful course and proven successful method for acquiring wealth.

Statement of Principles

WHAT WE ARE NOT – We are not connected or associated in any way with any brokerage firm or insurance company or with any financial offering of any kind.

WHAT WE ARE – We are an independent educational service offering a totally unique, completely practical course and proven successful method for acquiring wealth.

OUR OBJECTIVE – Our objective is to enable each person enrolled in the program to achieve security and financial independence . . . independent of the views of salespeople and others with a vested interest in a particular type of investment . . . and with just those investments deemed suitable and satisfactory.

No-Risk Enrollment Form

To: Mr. Ronald C. Hume
Financial Education Services
716 Gordon Baker Road, Willowdale, Ontario M2H 3M8

I accept your invitation to evaluate the Successful Investing & Money Management course for myself without risk or obligation. Please send me lessons 1 & 2 and enter my 4-month FREE subscription to The MoneyLetter.

I enclose my Registration Fee of $5, which you guarantee to return if I decide to return the lessons within 15 days of receiving them.

Otherwise, send me the balance of the 29 lessons (at the rate of two lessons approximately every 3 weeks), and bill me only $9 for each lesson received. I may cancel my enrollment at any time and pay for materials only after I have had the opportunity to examine them for a full 15 days.

Your tuition is tax deductible

Successful Investing & Money Management has been certified under the Federal Income Tax Act as an authorized course. All tuition fees can be deducted from your income.

Watchdog Richards Report #152 Congratulations to Mayor Bill Tindall for seeing that a crippled Old Age Pensioner's request for some badly needed benches at a Central Bus Stop location will be provided for Senior Citizens. Also for the Mayor's open-door policy to those City-of-Victoria residents who wish to appear in person on designated Friday mornings. A special thank you to Victoria Policeman James Appleyard for saving the life of a 60-year-old found unconscious on a Douglas Street sidewalk. Please continue to phone 383-6259 or write Your City Watchdog C. Joe Richards, PO Box 154 for information regarding Municipal matters. Seen-in-Passing: Jack Tang clearing snow off sidewalk at 9:30 pm in front of Tang's Pagoda. Roxanne Fafard and her friend Shari heckling the Watchdog's bowling team at Mayfair Lanes. Postscript: Many thanks to a Doctor Trevor ---- who in front of Mount St. Mary Hospital offered to give your City Watchdog's dead battery a jump start during last Tuesday's snow.

NOTICE!
Warehouse relocation
EMERGENCY SALE!

We have been given notice to vacate our present storage warehouse by the end of this month - Yes! so little time --- and so much stock to be vacated! We do not want to truck so much stock to another location at the end of January, therefore we are having an emergency stock reduction sale directly from our store location.

Prices have been slashed now! Very substantial reductions on chesterfield suites, sofa beds, swivel chairs, recliners, coffee and lamp tables, wall bookcase units, dining room groupings, kitchen sets, bedroom suites, mattress and box units, bunk and mates beds, assorted headboards, maple and light pecan finish dressers, chest of drawers, desks, night tables, headboards, cedar chests etc. -- also Speed Queen dryers, Gibson ranges, refrigerators, dishwashers, Electrohome microwave ovens, colour TV sets, console stereos and Juliet stereo package units.

First come - first serve while warehouse stock lasts. Flexible credit terms available.

DISTINCTIVE FAMILY HOME

It appears small and unimpressive from the exterior, but belies a magnificent large interior. For example: the large master bdrm which boasts of its own fireplace (there are 3 all told). A large walk-in closet and a full 5 pce. ensuite. Much more can't be seen from the simple unobstrusive exterior. It's approx. 2200 sq. ft. of deluxe, different, family accommodation (no views) priced below replacement cost at $120,000. So don't hesitate on this one, see it with Diane or Wally today.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Sunroom sowings usually a success

By HILDA BEASTALL

Indoor seed sowing now either in home windows or in slightly heated greenhouse, or glass-enclosed sunroom, is usually successful because increasing power of sun rays from late January on encourage healthy seedling growth.

Also if you find the influence of the new moon phase beneficial to young growth, there is this added advantage with a new moon on January 17.

Sow only seeds which take three months of cool growing to reach a size to plant outdoors by about the end of April; they will then be ready to form flower buds which begin opening in early May.

Home gardeners have been known to give up on raising their own petunias, snapdragons and trailing lobelia because the plants spent the summer growing instead of flowering. Blooms might be seen by late August through September. Seeds for these plants were sown in spring, often not until April.

It is quite possible for the determined amateur to raise summer flowering annuals of the three kinds mentioned if the seeds are sown indoors by mid January.

As with all indoor seedling growing, the aim is to produce strong small plants with good root systems. These results are obtained by slow steady growth, without fertilizer and without more than moderate indoor warmth, a range of temperature between 18 and 20 deg. C. A little lower at night is acceptable, but not higher, especially in the early growth stage while first leaves are forming.

The seeds of Lobelia, Snaps and Petunias should be sown according to the number of plants required. If you want three dozen plants of each, estimate roughly about 60 seeds or so. Only the Lobelia is pricked out in groups of tiny seedlings together; Snapdragons and Petunias are easily separated to prick out singly.

Sow each kind of seed in a separate small (three of four-inch diameter) shallow container of fine sterilized compost soil, being sure that soil level is no more than a quarter -inch below rim of pot. This ensures the sprouting seeds will have immediate all-round light without stretching their white stems. You then find the green seed leaves developing at soil surface instead of a half-inch or more up on the frail stem. Don't forget to label each pot clearly with date of sowing and name, also variety.

Covering the pots with clean glass or plastic prevents the previously dampened seed compost from drying. Condensed moisture on the glass or plastic should drain back into the soil each day.

For the first week or so, add a paper cover over the glass to provide darkness, for the small seeds are only barely covered and they need darkness as well as warmth and moisture for germination.

When signs of seeds sprouting is first seen as tiny white dots in the dark soil, move the pot to a slightly lower temperature, take off the paper so there will be more direct overhead light. Hot sunshine at a window will be too much at this early stage; a gauze (cheesecloth or similar) baffle is ideal for two or three days.

Snapdragons will be the first to prick out singly into three-inch deep flats of screened compost. Next the tiny petunias which amaze you within the first month with their sturdy growth.

Lobelia, both the trailing and the bush kinds, are normally taken three of five seedlings together for making into one plant. A single frail seedling alone will sometimes succumb whereas the group seems to flourish. Since all these lobelia seedlings will be exactly alike, the plan is quite acceptable.

The rule for growing seedlings indoors or in slightly heated greenhouse or sunporch is mild warmth, good light, some ventilation and an early sowing.

Gandhi predicts stability as ministers sworn in

NEW DELHI (AP) — Indira Gandhi took the oath as India's prime minister today, capping a phoenix-like rise from the ashes of political defeat in the 1977 national election.

In a ceremony at Rashtrapati Bhavan, the presidential palace, President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy swore in the daughter of India's first prime minister, the late Jawaharlal Nehru, for her fourth term as leader of this nation of 640 million people, the world's most populous democracy.

Mrs. Gandhi's Indira Congress party scored a landslide victory in the national election Jan. 3 and 6, winning 351 of 525 seats in the lower house of Parliament.

Taking the oath along with Mrs. Gandhi were 14 cabinet ministers and seven ministers of state. Most of them are new to national politics but held top posts in state governments. She appointed only two members of her previous cabinets, Railway Minister Kamlapathi Tripathi and Works and Housing Minister P. C. Sethi.

Mrs. Gandhi chose P. V. Narasimha Rao, a farmer, lawyer and former chief minister of the southern state of Andhra Pradesh, to be as her foreign minister. Mrs. Gandhi's choice of a man with no experience in foreign affairs indicated she plans to dominate foreign policy herself, as she did during her other governments.

Mrs. Gandhi apparently fears India's traditional foes, Pakistan and China, more than she does the Soviet Union, a longtime ally. Pakistan stands to get military aid from China and the West to help it stand against any possibly Soviet attack on it through Afghanistan.

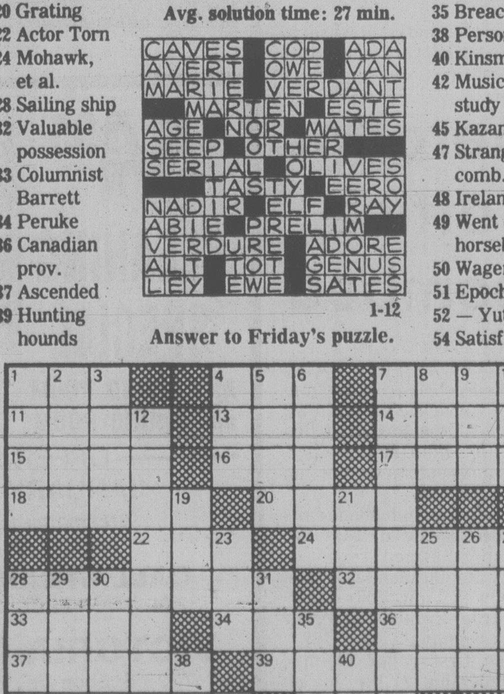
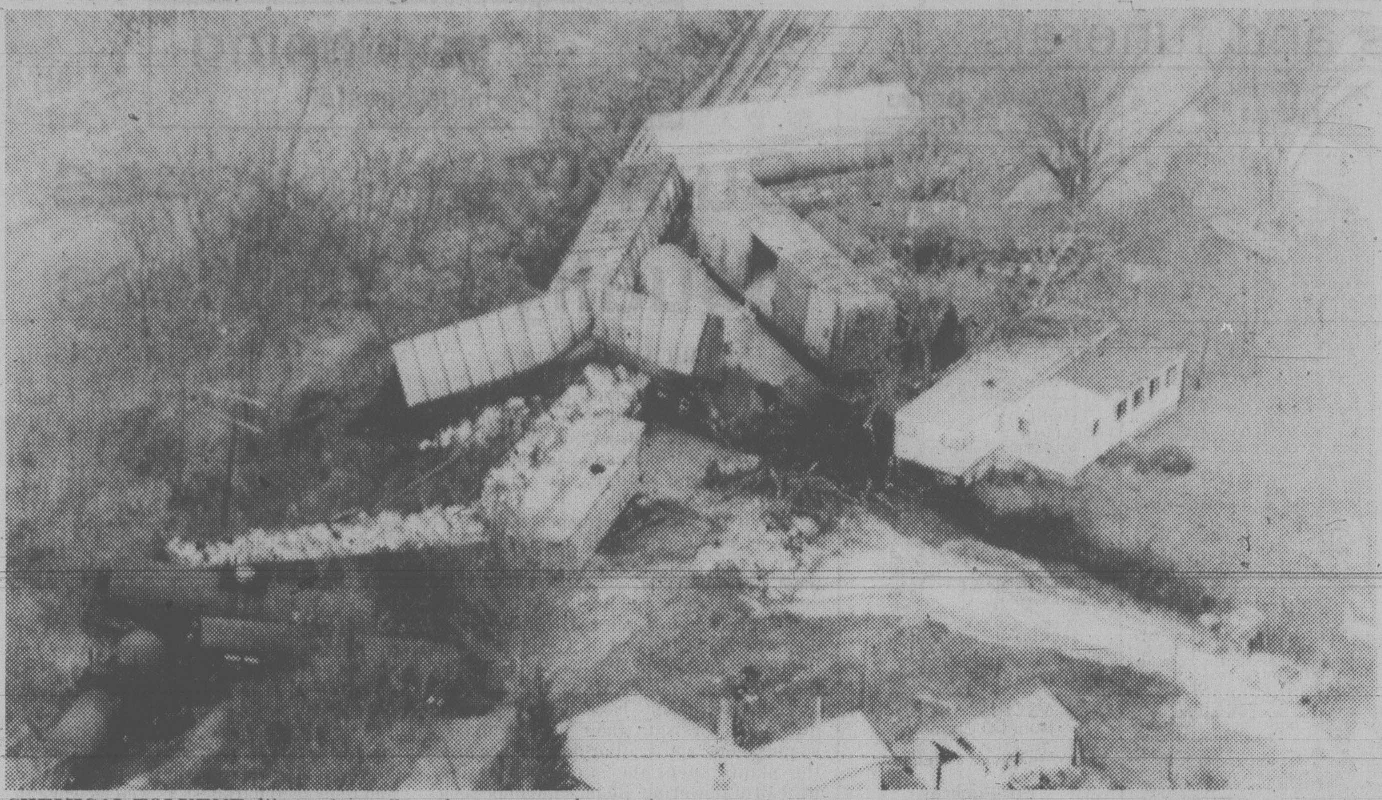
Answer to Friday's puzzle.





CHEMICAL TOLUENE diisocyanate flows between two houses in Millfield, Ohio, after 15 cars of a Conrail train derailed early Sunday morning. About 750 people were evacuated from the area and six were treated at a hospital for exposure to chemical fumes. By Sunday night, all but 80 of those evacuated returned to their homes. The chemical is used in the making of plastics.

U.S. hideout for Nazi butcher?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some 200 Romanian Jews were killed in a Bucharest slaughterhouse in 1941, their bodies left hanging from hooks labeled "Kosher Meat."

One of the men accused of the mass murder — Valerian Trifa — has lived quietly in the United States since 1950, and even delivered an opening prayer before a session of the Senate, according to a powerful new television documentary.

The documentary predicts that only a few of the more than 200 alleged Nazi war criminals living in the United States will ever face justice for killing as many as 2 million people.

The ABC News Closeup — combining fresh interviews with grisly flashbacks of Nazi atrocities — took reporters as far away as Romania in an attempt to check out charges against alleged war criminals living in America.

One of several alleged war criminals spotlighted in the hour-long report, airing Sunday over more than 200 affiliates, was Trifa, a U.S. citizen now living in Grass Lake, Mich., and ordained as an archbishop of the Romanian Orthodox Episcopate of America.

In Bucharest, Rabbi Moshe Rosen, head of the Romanian Jewish community, told ABC of the 1941 slaughter and identified Trifa as one of the leaders of the fascist, anti-semitic Iron Guards held responsible.

"Trifa was known, not only from me, everybody here in Romania of my generation," Rosen said.

ABC showed anti-semitic documents listing Trifa's name. Trifa fled Romania, where he was later tried in absentia and sentenced to life at hard labor.

"Since 1950, Trifa has been living safely in the United States," ABC said.

It said he delivered an opening prayer before a Senate session in 1955 and broadcast over Radio Free Europe. ABC said he refused to be interviewed but faces a Justice Department trial in an attempt to strip him of his citizenship.

The documentary — entitled Escape from Justice: Nazi War Criminals in America —, said only West Germany and Argentina are thought to have more resident war criminals than the United States.

ABC said the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service for decades all but ignored evidence of war crimes background in letting aliens into the country.

It said the Justice Department began investigating the charges recently, but only 16 cases, mostly involving East Europeans, are now in active litigation.

The documentary said the prospects for bringing the alleged criminals to justice become bleak as the years pass because of the death of witnesses as well as suspects.

The report said some war criminals or persons connected with war crimes came into the United States under a secret U.S. government program code-named "Project Paper Clip."

ABC said the program, which brought more than 900 German scientists to the United States after World War II, officially barred active Nazis, but "screening procedures were lax and in some cases negligent."

The report also cited a General Accounting Office study that said seven alleged Nazi war criminals have been employed by the CIA, one by the Defense Department and one by the State Department.

"In addition, 24 others have had some contact with the CIA or FBI," it said.

Asbestos widely used despite proven hazard

CHICAGO (UPI) — Despite years of medical warnings about asbestos fibers, the fireproofing material is still in widespread use in America and could account for half a million deaths by the end of the century, a researcher warns.

Dr. Irving J. Selikoff of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, says cancer and other diseases caused by asbestos since its introduction during World War II are only now beginning to show up.

He predicted 20,000 asbestos-related deaths will occur each year by the end of the century unless there is a massive public health campaign to eliminate its use.

"In the period between World War II and the end of this century, well over half a million Americans will have died of asbestos-related diseases," Selikoff said in this week's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

He said 700,000 tons of asbestos is still being used each year in the United States, chiefly in products such as cement pipe, brake linings, paper products and textiles. The substance can be found in buildings, schools, homes and cars.

Most recently, its use in home hair dryers touched off a public health scare that resulted in the manufacturers' voluntary recall of many of the dryers.

Research linking asbestos with cancer and other noncurable illnesses began surfacing more than a decade ago. Because it often takes 25 to 30 years from the time of asbestos exposure until the disease symptoms occur, Selikoff said Americans already are facing a major public health threat.

Aside from "meagre attempts to regulate new asbestos use and to monitor occupational exposure, virtually nothing is being done to remedy the public health failure and turn back the legacy of death from asbestos," he said.

"Unless we learn the lessons of the past, we are destined to compound the deadly legacy of asbestos and start the clock ticking for the next 40 years," he said.

Aeroflot office bombed

NEW YORK (AP) — Explosives experts today studied debris from a bomb that exploded at the midtown office of the Soviet airline Aeroflot, injuring three persons and sending tremors up Fifth Avenue.

In separate telephone calls to The Associated Press, two groups claimed responsibility for the Sunday explosion, which injured two tourists from France and a New York woman.

The first caller claimed membership in the Jewish Defence League and said the JDL planted the bomb to protest the imprisonment of Soviet dissidents.

A second caller claimed the anti-Castro group Omega 7 bombed the office to show "solidarity with the people of Cuba and Afghanistan in their struggle against Soviet imperialism."

Radioactive pellets in truck collision

DUBOIS, Pa. (AP) — A tractor-trailer carrying radioactive cobalt pellets collided with another truck in an ice storm, and Pennsylvania police said extremely low-level radiation was leaking.

A 25-kilometre section of an interstate highway was temporarily closed after the accident about 11:30 p.m. Sunday. By daybreak, the cobalt truck was removed from the roadway and the highway was later reopened, police said.

Authorities said no radioactive material was spilled and no evacuation was ordered in the sparsely populated area in rural northwest Pennsylvania 150 km north of Pittsburgh.

Neither driver was severely injured, said state police Cpl. Donald Bedford.

Bedford said Geiger counter readings taken by civil defence personnel measured the radiation at less than two milliroentgens an hour.

Initially, authorities had said Geiger counter readings varied from 0.65 roentgen to four roentgens of gamma radiation an hour.

"The readings turned out to be not nearly as high as they said at first," Bedford said.

State police said radiation apparently was coming from a crack in the trailer compartment of the rig.

Warren Bassett, administrator of nearby Brookville Hospital, had said earlier that four roentgens of gamma radiation an hour would represent a major health hazard. But he said that tests showed no contamination on anyone who had been near the cobalt cargo.

A representative of Advanced Medical Systems told state police the pellets were sealed in a steel canister that would break only under stress much greater than that produced in a highway collision.

The cobalt truck was operated by Gateway Transportation Corp. of Cleveland, state police said.

Clean-up operations were to begin after the radiation was accurately measured, state police said.

Hess wants out

BONN (Reuter) — Lawyers acting for Rudolf Hess, Hitler's former deputy who has been imprisoned since 1946 and whose release Moscow has so far vetoed, have appealed to U.S. President Carter for Hess's release in view of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Rhodesian refugee appeal made

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The UN High Commissioner for Refugees appealed to all nations for $22 million to repatriate 200,000 Zimbabwe refugees and said new or worsening refugee problems would double the agency's 1980 budget.

"The numbers and needs of refugees is constantly increasing, forcing us to revise the figure of $234 million for 1980's programs to one nearer $500 million," High Commissioner Poul Hartling told a news conference.

Hartling said one of the most urgent problems at the moment is to repatriate as many as possible of the 200,000 Zimbabweans back to their country for the elections on Feb. 25 from the surrounding countries of Mozambique, Zambia and Botswana.

"The other major crisis areas are Somalia, which has the highest proportion of refugees in the world; Thailand with its continuing influx of Cambodian refugees, and Pakistan, which has seen a dramatic increase of Afghan refugees since the Soviet intervetntion last month," Hartling said.

Meanwhile in Salisbury, guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo, defying death threats from white Rhodesians and South Africans, returned home Sunday to a hero's welcome from 120,000 cheering blacks.

"It's unfortunate we had to fight a war to bring about universal suffrage elections," said the 62-year-old leader of the Zimbabwe African People's Union as he arrived in Salisbury after three years of self-imposed exile with his guerrillas in Zambia. "Let's get together and say it's over."

The other leader of the Popular Front guerrilla alliance, Robert Mugabe of the Zimbabwe African National Union, is to return next Sunday from Mozambique, where his guerrillas were based during the seven-year war against white rule. Nkomo, Mugabe and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rhodesia's first black prime minister, will be the leading candidates in the elections to be held Feb. 27-29.

A secret group of South African businessmen has offered $125,000 to anyone who assassinates Nkomo and a number of white Rhodesians have also threatened to kill him. The airport was heavily guarded for his arrival and a helicopter took him from there to the black township of Highfield, on the outskirts of Salisbury, where the huge crowd waited to greet him.

"We have won our country," he shouted hoarsely as the throng pressed toward the two-storey-high wooden platform and hundreds fainted in the crush and heat.

But Nkomo also urged that Rhodesia's nine million blacks show moderation in their post-war dealings with the 250,000 whites who tried so hard to block black rule.

"We are not racists," he declared. "This was a war we did not want."

The war was the result of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain in 1965 to block black rule. Nkomo and Mugabe formed the Popular Front in 1974, but the alliance was an uneasy one, and they never unified their forces in the field.

Nkomo, considered more moderate than the Mugabe, returned on the 16th day of a ceasefire agreed to by the guerrilla leaders and Muzorewa at a conference in London at which they also agreed on a new constitution reducing the rights of the whites.

Muzorewa, who became the country's first black prime minister after elections in April, agreed to step aside, and Britain resumed control of the breakaway colony until after the elections. Meanwhile, about 22,000 guerrillas have turned themselves in and are gathered in assembly areas supervised by 1,300 British and Commonwealth soldiers.

Italian sextuplets all expected to survive

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) — Doctors said they were optimistic Sunday that the world's second known set of sextuplets all would survive.

Two girls, Linda and Letizia, and four boys, Francesco, Giorgio, Fabrizio and Roberto, were born Friday by Caesarian section to Rosanna Giannini, 28, a high school teacher.

Six years earlier, Susan Jane Rosenkowitz of South Africa gave birth to two girls and four boys in the only other recorded case of surviving sextuplets listed in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Doctors at the Meyer clinic in Florence, which specializes in the care of underweight babies, said the Giannini sextuplets were born at reasonable weights ranging from 2.2 to 4.4 pounds and are drinking milk from bottles.

A doctor at the clinic said the sextuplets were being fed on milk donated by other nursing mothers, "and they're liking it."

He said "If there are no complications, there is no reason why they should not all survive."

Mrs. Giannini and her husband, Franco, made an arrangement with a weekly magazine for photographic rights and detailed information about the sextuplets.

They were negotiating with food and clothing firms to help finance the expected cost of bringing up the family.

Salvador militants free 1

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Leftist militants on Sunday released a young woman who was one of seven hostages they had been holding in the Panamanian Embassy in San Salvador.

They said the move was intended as sign of "good faith" to show they are determined to settle the standoff.

The militants, members of the Popular League of Feb. 28, seized the embassy Friday and are still holding six other hostages, including Panamanian Ambassador David Pere Ramos and Costa Rican Ambassador Alejandro Alvarado.

A militant spokesman said embassy attache Guadalupe de Mendez had been freed because she has a two-month old child.

The others being held are three El Salvadoran employees and Costa Rican Charge d'Affaires Santos David Lopez.

The militants are demanding that the government release six members of the group arrested last month after a clash with national guardsmen and that it explain the disappearance of six other people at that time.

The hostages have told reporters permitted inside the embassy that they are being treated well. "We have complete freedom to move around the embassy," Ramos said Saturday.

The militant group takes its name from the date in 1977 when national guardsmen fired on demonstrators protesting alleged fraud in the election that brought rightist President Carlos Humberto Romero to power. The government said 23 people were killed but witnesses said more than 100 died and 250 were wounded.

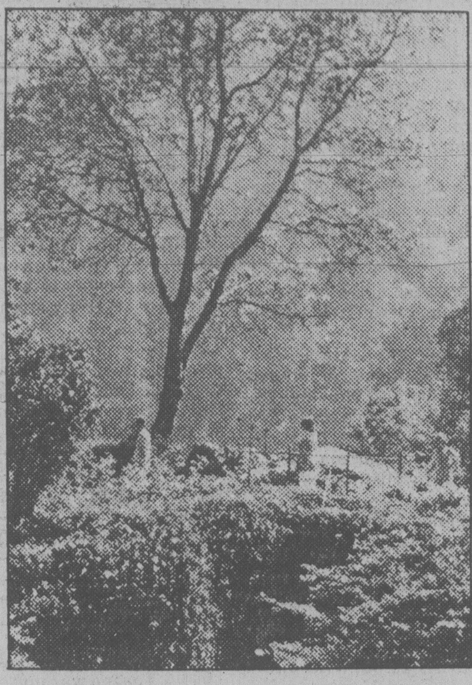
In case you're wondering



The Butchart Gardens' flowers are magnificent but it must be a tremendous chore to keep them watered, especially in the summer. How do they manage it?

It is all done overnight when the throngs of visitors have departed.

A massive automatic sprinkling system is turned on throughout the grounds.

The watering would be pretty expensive if the gardens didn't have their own reservoirs. Only the restaurant gets its water supply from the municipal source. They're not sure how many gallons it takes to keep Butchart's in bloom but it's plenty.

Since Jenny Butchart in 1908 started to transform an ugly 50-foot quarry into a thing of beauty, the gardens have grown into a major attraction employing 200 during the peak summer season and drawing more than 500,000 visitors a year.

The plants require plenty of attention from 35 full-time gardeners. Two horticultural consultants are kept busy year-round.

The gardens are open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. from Mother's Day until the end of September.

But the cut in visitor hours doesn't mean the flower displays are over until next spring. The plants continue to bloom until the first major frost, usually in early November.

A professional look at the '80s

Social services to tighten the belt

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Professionals in health care and government social agencies will put more effort in the 1980s into plugging the gaps in existing services.

The belt-tightening forecast for the new decade was gathered from interviews with three Victoria spokesmen for the B.C. Association of Social Workers and other professionals in the field, at the end of a 10-year period of great expansion in social services and health care spending.

Keith Anderson, director of counselling at Victoria General Hospital, says hospitals and the medical profession are faced with a number of issues as they enter the '80s.

"We still haven't peaked with the age bulge," he says.

Twenty-six per cent of Victoria's population is over 65, and that figure is going to rise throughout the 1980s. It's a crucial statistic for hospital administrators. The elderly account for twice as many admissions to hospital as their proportion in the general population.

Hospitals will have to tackle the problems of depersonalized health care created by increasingly advanced technology. The costs of increased medical technology and general health care will pinch harder than before and the role of the hospital itself will undergo significant changes.

"Hospital health care has had its essential focus on illness," says Anderson.

Now there's a shift to emphasis on prevention.

A shift in attitude is also under way, Anderson says.

Hospitals, the journal of the American Hospital Association, recently published a long article on the need to humanize health services, to reverse the process by which the patient has become just a part of the machinery.

In the 1980s, professionals in the field will also work to accomplish a greater co-ordination of health services, especially for the handicapped.

Joyce Masselink, president of the south Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Association of Social Workers (BCASW), says the coming decade will bring a "sharper struggle" for dollars.

Those who push for new services must prove in the long term it's cost-effective.

Anderson foresees social workers influencing social policy more in the coming years. There will be a real need for people well-trained in the economics of socal policy — what it costs to do this instead of that, and how much money can be saved by taking option B instead of policy A.

The social workers' association has been examining the gaps in services, the places where individuals fall through the extensive net of existing aid programs. It wants the government to look at people who are not helped by the statutory services.

Volunteer groups have sprung up to fill a demand — for example, the NEED crisis line, Divorce Lifeline for couples undergoing the trauma of separation, Prime Time for women in their middle years — but their funding is tenuous at best.

The BCASW wants to see more preventive services. One social worker notes as an example the 18-to-25 age group. They're too old for child welfare services, they're out of school and there aren't any jobs for them. A young girl may get pregnant or her boyfriend may get in trouble with the law. Then a government agency will enter the picture, but in many cases it's too late. The problem could have been prevented with help at an earlier age.

The social planning council suggested by some aldermen and concerned professionals in Victoria as a means of pulling together various services in the capital region would be a helpful reform, says Masselink. Professionals are agreed on the need for more co-ordination.

Anderson suggests something like the family services associations operated in Edmonton, Calgary and Toronto. They're central agencies where professionals with different skills are grouped under one roof, available to counsel people whose needs don't really fall into any of the standard categories.

It wouldn't have to be a government agency but it should have a regular government grant. The Alberta family service associations get funds from three levels of government.

It has been a success at generating a greater public awareness of the problem, but no new staff was added to cope with the huge numbers of complaints coming in.

City looks at sites for housing

The city of Victoria may open up its 4.5-acre Mt. Stephen property and other small parcels of city-owned land for housing development under the provincial government's new low-cost mortgage scheme, Mayor Bill Tindall said today.

He said in an interview city planning officials are studying the land in question and hopefully recommendations will be put to council before the end of the month.

If council approves the development of the Mt. Stephen property it would open up much-needed lots for those who want to apply for the new low-cost mortgage money.

Premier Bennett announced last week that the government is making $200 million available through credit unions at 9¾ per cent to encourage more building of houses for sale and also construction of rental units.

The mortgage term is three and a half years.

To qualify for the new, low rate, houses must not be started before Tuesday and must be started before June 30 and be owner-occupied by Dec.31.

They say there just aren't that many lots available and by the time new lots were properly zoned and ready for building the deadline for the start of construction would have passed.

John Cowlin, a director of the Greater Victoria chapter of the Housing and Urban Development Association (HUDAC), said it would be "sheer good luck" for people to find lots.

He said the program is a good one but only for those who have lots ready for development.

He also said there aren't that many homes on the market, perhaps about 50.

Meanwhile, Harold Eisner, president of the Vancouver chapter of HUDAC, says the provincial government's new mortgage scheme may slow the sale of homes now available.

He says the program will encourage some housing activity, however, "many of the Greater Vancouver builders, who have homes under construction or in inventory at higher interest rates, are very concerned that the new program will delay the sale of their present units."

$5,500 saving on solar pool

The city could save at least $5,500 a year on its fuel oil with solar-assisted heating for Crystal Pool, Ald. Robin Blencoe said today.

What could be B.C.'s first solar-heated public swimming pool is proposed in a report from the city engineer.

Blencoe, chairman of city council energy conservation committee, said the proposal is a "good deal even at current oil prices. But in a few years oil will be an astronomical price," and the saving on heating will be much more significant.

He said the proposal is the first of a variety of applications for energy-saving to be outlined in his committee's first conservation report to be presented to council next week.

Engineer John Sansom said the capital cost of installing solar collectors on the lower roof of the Crystal building would be $100,000. At current oil prices they would save a minimum of $5,500 annually by producing water to help keep pool temperature at 83 degrees F.

The report said 40 per cent of the city's fuel oil bill is consumed by the Crystal, and that solar panels would reduce this by 6.6 per cent.

Blencoe said the city has made application to the provincial conservation and renewable energy development and demonstration program for a grant covering half the capital cost.

He said later undertakings would consider other sources of funding, including the federal government's alternative energy promotion programs.

Sansom said the collectors would cover 3,000 square feet of area, and would be mounted unobtrusively.

Driftwood blamed

A chimney fire caused by burning wet driftwood was blamed for a $5,000 fire at the home of Duncan M. Flett, 1482 Dallas, at 8:50 p.m. Sunday.

Firemen said the chimney was badly creosoted, the result of incomplete combustion of wet wood used as fuel.

B.C. aid sought for temple

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson today asked the provincial government for technical assistance in the restoration of the city's only Chinese temple damaged by fire last week.

Hanson sent a letter to Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe stating that his ministry has some of the finest museum technicians and conservators in the country.

Investigators believe the fire Friday was started by an oil lamp which ignited embroidered silk tapestries.

Builder wins zoning fight

A B.C. Supreme Court judgment quashing a Saanich rezoning bylaw will allow developers Belvedere Estates Ltd. to construct an office complex on a 1.5-acre Gordon Head property.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer Friday ruled against a bylaw changing the zoning from commercial to residential category and ordered Saanich to pay court costs, the company's lawyer, Terence O'Grady, said today.

Saanich council decided in 1978 to change a long-standing light commercial zoning on the Blair Avenue property after nearby residents opposed owner Belevedere's proposal for a a 30,000-square-foot office-retail complex.

The company claimed the action was discriminatory and launched a petition to quash the bylaw.

Saanich council repealed the bylaw to tighten it up and passed the revised version earlier this year with only Ald. Sandy Noel opposed. Belvedere then filed another petition to have it quashed.

Saanich lawyer Brian Smith told Mr. Justice Dryer council had a right to review and change zoning provided it did not thwart one person.

He said the zoning change affected other limited commercial areas and that the world had changed in Gordon Head between 1964, the year the property was zoned for commercial purposes, and 1979.

The area is now well populated and residents do not want a commercial development in their front yards, Smith said.

The fact that council changed the zoning on several other limited commercial properties at the same time proves Belvedere wasn't discriminated against, he said.

Police arrested a 22-year-old suspect in downtown Victoria and charged him with armed robbery after a female impersonator using a butcher knife held up a store and tried to get a free paper from a newsboy Saturday.

A man dressed as a woman in a yellow hat, beige sweater and blue jeans obtained a small sum of money from the 711 Store at Hillside and Douglas shortly before 7:30 a.m.

Just before 3 p.m. at Yates and Broad a newspaper vendor was approached by a person fitting the same description. He later told police the man asked for a paper and when he was refused, pulled out a nine-inch knife to threaten the boy.

Owners of the Sound Hound at Oak Bay Junction report about $1,500 worth of stereo tuners missing after a breakin discovered at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Christmas sales up 12% but stores pushed harder

Victoria stores have reported a 12-per-cent increase in Christmas sales revenues but they had to work harder for it than in previous years.

Many shops had to reduce prices to bring in the customers.

"Normally, stores don't hold sales until January but this year they held them in December," said Wally Pickering, local manager of the Canada Employment Centre.

He said most merchants were satisfied with the final results, although profit margins were lower because of the special sales.

Victoria appeared to be influenced by reports from Eastern Canada that retail sales would be slow this Christmas, he said.

"Merchants responded with vigorous promotions and it paid off for them. They had a good season and the economy continues to be strong for this time of year."

Pickering said the hospitality industry also did well over Christmas. Hotels and motels were full along the Gorge as well as downtown.

"Victoria is a retirement community and many families visited their parents here during Christmas. Some of these visitors stayed in hotels and motels."

Pickering said a survey by CEC information officer Dan Bowes showed that Victoria's economy generally continues to be solid.

Employment levels at Burrard Yarrows Corp. shipyard soared to 700 in December, up from 470 in November, due to major hull repair work on the Star Opal and some refit and fabrication on the new ferry.

Construction activity held up well in December other than normal shutdowns for Christmas. Uemmployment in the building trades is down to 20 per cent, after being as high as 35 per cent, but no further improvement is expected before spring.

Real estate sales were strong in December with $11.4 million worth of properties sold through the Multiple Listing Service, up from $7 million the previous December. There were 162 properties sold during the month, up from 107.

However, there were only 259 listings at month's end, compared with 379 at the same time in 1978.

Lumber markets are expected to be good during the first half of 1980 but plywood markets are soft.

Loggers had a long vacation because the Christmas layoff was followed by heavy snow.

Agriculture is at a low ebb. About 60 jobs were filled through the CEC's farm labor office in December, some of them for greenhouse clean-up.

Only 24 people are employed in maintenance work at Oakland Fisheries and no increase is expected until the herring roe season begins in March.

Soviet skater new champ

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — Natalia Petrusheva of the Soviet Union won the first three races and placed sixth in the final 3,000-metre event Sunday to dethrone Beth Heiden of the United States as the world all-round women's speed-skating champion.

Heiden finished second, more than a time point behind the 24-year-old Soviet skater. Bjoerg Eva Jensen of Norway captured third place in the over-all standings after winning the 3,000 metres final in track record time. Former all-round champion Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg placed sixth over-all.

Heiden set the old track record last year when she won all all four races and beat runner-up Petrusheva by more than 2.5 points.

Burka said she will concentrate on the 1,000 and 1,500-metre races when she and the other two members of the Canadian team here — Kathy Vogt of Winnipeg and Brenda Webster of Regina — join the other members of the Canadian squad in Davos for the Swiss championships next weekend. These will serve as Olympic trials for the Canadians.

After winning the 500, 1,500 and 1,000-metre races, Petrusheva settled for sixth in the 3,000. Heiden was second in this race and Sarah Doer of the U.S. was third. Burka placed seventh.

By winning the 3,000 meters, Jensen overtook Sylvia Filipsson of Sweden in the over-all standings. Filipsson placed fourth, followed by Sabine Becker of East Germany and Burka.

Sunday's comptition was staged in foggy, cold weather with temperatures around -12 degrees.

Petrusheva, who had clinched the title by winning the the three first races, had a final score of 179.046 to 180.163 for Heiden and 180.922 for Jensen. Filipsson scored 181.136, Becker 182.028 and Burka 182.065.

The other two Canadians entered here, Vogt and Webster, did not qualify for the 3,000-metre final and therefore did not figure in the final points standings.

Saturday, Petrusheva won the 500 and 1,500. Sunday, she won the 1,000, followed by Hensen, Heiden and Burka.

The International Skating Union rules state that a skater who wins three of four races at international championships automatically is the over-all winner as long as the final fourth race is completed.

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Eric Heiden of Madison, Wis., the reigning world all-round and sprint speed skating champion, smashed his own world 1,000-metre sprint record with a time of one minute, 13.60 seconds Sunday during an international meet.

Heiden also bettered the world mark for sprint points, posting 150.255 points over the weekend meet in two 500 and two 1,000-metre races. The previous record of 151.190 was held by Evgeny Kulikov of the Soviet Union.

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (AP) — Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein followed the example of his sister, Hanni, and took the lead in the men's World Cup standings Sunday by winning a slalom at the 40th international Hahnenkamm ski races.

He now leads in the overall Cup standings with 110 points. His sister tops the women's list with 172.

Wenzel's winning time for the two heats was one minute, 41.10 seconds. Christian Neureuther, 30, of West Germany finished second in 1:41.78 with Jacques Luethy of Switzerland third.

Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, the defending World Cup slalom champion, trailed badly after the first heat. He had caught his left ski in a gate pole and freed it with an acrobatic feat. With a late starting number he schussed down the second heat to finish with a total time of 1:43.08 for a 13th-place tie with Gustavo Thoeni of Italy.

Yugoslavian slalom ace Bojan Krizaj, who finished fourth in the slalom in 1:31.94, moved to third place in the standings with 75 points.

RADIAL
TRAX 12

NEW TRAX 12
from
Firestone®

With the new all season TRAX 12 from Firestone, you're through changing tires as often as the seasons. The revolutionary multi-purpose tread of TRAX 12 will eat up just about any driving condition the weatherman throws at you. Plus you get the ride comfort and road-handling stability you expect from radial tires. TRAX 12 is a polyester radial – strong, flexible and impact resistant.

Put a set of TRAX 12 radials on your car today. Then let the sun shine, the rain pour and the snow fall.

SPRING
Your TRAX 12 has open shoulder slots to channel water out the tread when driving on rain-soaked roads. This greatly reduces hydroplaning and provides better contact between your tires and the road.

SUMMER
The computer designed tread pattern of your TRAX 12 has a dividing center rib to keep your tires running quietly, even at highway speeds on hot summer roads.

FALL
The roads may be dry and hot one day and snow covered the next. That's okay. Your TRAX 12 radials may be better prepared for sudden changes in the weather than you are.

WINTER
Your TRAX 12 has tapered shoulders and interlocking deep groove lateral Z-bar cleats for positive traction in mud and snow and slush.

Keep a sizeable length of old garden hose in your car and you might get out of a sticky (muddy) or slippery (snowy) situation much easier. The old hose can be stretched back and forth in front of two tires for better gripping, said the country gentleman.

Count lamps and other lighting fixtures in your home and you know the numberof light bulbs eventually needed as replacements. Count on paying at least 70 cents each when you buy a pack of two most common wattage bulbs. You might save a third of that cost by buying part of a case lot at a lighting fixture store. Some such stores discount bulb prices (by, say, a third) when you buy 48 same-wattage bulbs. Too many? Share the bargain with a neighbor.

Many of us learned at Christmas not to add batteries to a battery-powered gift which won't be unwrapped for at least a day. "Off" switches can be jiggled "on" and a battery's power is gone within a few hours. If you like, install the battery but do not connect it to the terminals.

She has ocean-hopping habit

Next came a move to France to brush up on the French language at the Sorbonne in Paris, where she stayed for almost a year.

At the end of that time she went back to Brussels as a local employee with the Canadian delegation at NATO, until she was accepted and could transfer to the defence planning and policy division of the international secretariat at NATO.

With that appointment Hilary Groos became a permanent member of the international staff with the privilege of working for any NATO organization and in any NATO country.

She has also been fortunate in still being able to join the North Atlantic Assembly for its annual meetings, to travel with it to Paris and Lisbon and back across the Atlantic to Ottawa and Williamsburg, Virginia, and to act as a liaison, at times, between national delegations at those meetings and NATO.

Quite recently Miss Groos moved to a new position with the visits section in the information directorate attached to NATO's department of political affairs.

This directorate has full responsibility for keeping people in all NATO countries fully informed.

"We write back suggested dates for a visit and we set up a program around the specific needs," Miss Groos explained.

When a group or an individual wants to contact other international organizations arrangements are made for them, with ample time for discussion.

Care is also taken to keep delegates of the various countries concerned informed as to what is happening by sending on to them copies of letters in which they might be interested.

"Some groups and individuals will be coming for their seventh year," Miss Groos said.

"Most of them are from England, the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany or France.

Commuting back and forth across the Atlantic, between Canada and western Europe, has been a way of life for Victoria's Hilary Groos, during the past four years.

Home during the holiday season to visit her mother, Mrs. David Groos, and for a reunion with a brother and two sisters and their families, she explained some of the reasons for these goings and comings.

It started at the beginning of 1976 when an application she made through a program that allowed graduate students to work as temporary help with certain international organizations, was accepted and she was assigned to the North Atlantic Assembly in Brussels.

When she arrived staff there were preparing a history of the assembly and she helped with research and wrote several chapters for the book.

The appointment was supposed to be for six months but Miss Groos was there for nearly a year.

That was followed by a jump back to Ottawa and an opportunity to do research and secretarial work in the office of a member of Parliament.

"However we do have a group of teachers from Canada who visit once a year and there is a group of Canadian mayors who have been over more than once."

Members of the international staff are well paid and there are many extra privileges, but that doesn't compensate for the high cost of living over there, Miss Groos said.

"People complain here because gasoline (regular) is around 25 cents a litre," she pointed out. "I pay 85 cents for the same amount over there.

"Then I buy a half dozen eggs I hand over the equivalent of $1 Canadian and on top of a rental fee for the telephone in my apartment, there's an extra charge for every call I make."

"As well it costs $100 Canadian to have that phone connected and if it had to be installed, the charge would be $200.

"There is also a compulsory deposit to cover any loss through non-payment of monthly accounts. No interest is added and the only way to get it back is to leave the city."

Despite these and other extra expenses, Hilary Groos describes Brussels as an exciting and rewarding place to work.

As she sees it "with NATO, the Common Market, SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters Allied Power in Europe) and other international organizations established there, as well as the offices of many multi-nationals, and with Brussels within easy reach of London, Paris and Amsterdam, it could easily be named the capital of Europe."

When she flew back to that city last Tuesday she was eagerly looking forward to continuing her work at NATO headquarters and to again being a part of the exciting international scene.

This patchwork design is a real ball

This little person is thrilled as he can be with his 3-D Ball. Made from from leftover bits of fabric, your material costs are practically nil when you clean out your sewing drawers. The beauty of this particular design, which is based on a Victorian pin-cushion, is that you can vary not only the colors, but the fabrics as well to make each one different. Babies and other little children, love textures. Here's your chance to use bits of corduroy, funfur, velvet, satin, velours and knits, as well as calico and broadcloth. Vary the colors too — make them as bright as possible. Each of the twelve padded segments can have different colors . . . very helpful when it comes time to teach color names.

This is a ball which Baby will have not trouble in grasping. It's approximately 20 cm (8") in diameter, lightweight when stuffed with polyester, and completely washable.

This is one time when accuracy of tracing the pattern pieces is essential. Each little section must join perfectly with the others to make the whole. It's fun to make, and a pleasure to give as a gift. The segments are joined together with colorful embroidery thread.

If you need a fund-raiser, these are bound to be a best-selling item. Because of the unusualness of the design, you should have no trouble selling these at a good profit. People marvel at the way they're made. Often they'd rather buy the item than try to make it themselves. All the members of your group could donate their materials.

You can call it a Whirlagig, a 3-D, or a simple patchwork play ball. Whatever you call it, it is a winner in more ways than one.

Happenings: Houston, Texas hosted the first Show and Sale for the Quilt retailers in the U.S. The show, which featured a super display of over 1,000 quilts from 30 different exhibitors, attracted people from all over. The items for sale included beautiful fabrics, new sizes of quilt batts, marking tools, templates, patterms, stencils, kits, and many, many books. The vast selection of items made it hard to decide where to look first, and illustrated and illustrated the tremendous popularity of quilting. The quilts on display were among those you may have seen in books. Authors, Dixie Haywood, Beth and Jeffrey Gutcheon, Carolyn Lee and Roberta Horton demonstrated their special techniques for everything from Machine Applique to Stained Glass quilt making. The highlight of this event was Show & Tell, which was held in a school. Dozens of quilters got up to show their work of the past few months. The oohs and aahs competed with the sound of flashbulbs popping. There were medallion quilts, batik quilts, applique quilts, patchwork quilts, stained glass quilts, children's quilts, and miniature quilts. At the Show & Tell I was amazed at the number of people who held up their absolutely gorgeous quilts shyly saying, "This is my first quilt."

Why not try quilting yourself — you'll never know your potential until you do. A good way to start is by taking a course or reading a book on the subject.

Teens drop dope

DENVER (AP) — Teenagers today are more conservative than their counterparts in the early 1970s, a recently released survey by Rand McNally and Co. says. Only eight per cent of the 50,000 students included in the Who's Who Among American High School Students said they smoked marijuana or favored living together. By comparison, 27 per cent surveyed in 1972 said they smoked marijuana and favored cohabitation.

Persian Gulf U.S. minefield?

Times News Services

The Carter administration is stepping up preparations to mine or blockade the Persian Gulf in case the president wants to exercise either option, government sources said Sunday night.

Beyond those assessments, the navy is sifting through its files of active and retired officers in a crash effort to find specialists in the tricky art of laying mines in distant waters like the Persian Gulf.

The navy already has drafted letters asking such retired specialists to return to active duty on a limited basis. Without a declaration of a national emergency, such requests must be by invitation rather than call-up orders.

Either mining the sea lanes of the Persian Gulf or sealing up that waterway by a blockade would cripple Iran's economy. The gulf is the main lifeline for food and other supplies going into Iran, as well as the exit passage for Iranian oil, the country's main source of wealth.

From a diplomatic standpoint, either mining or blockading the gulf would carry the risk of the Iranian militants hurting or killing the 50 American hostages held at gunpoint in Tehran.

From a military standpoint, there are also risks. But Carter could take them if diplomacy fails and other economic pressures fail.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said as much Sunday on Issues and Answers, (ABC-TV).

Asked about the prospects for a blockade, Brown said, "Specifically, we cannot rule out the options of cutting off Iranian imports by one means or another," though he added the pressures by the international community were "much preferable."

Under one plan, the president would set a deadline for the release of the hostages after the mines were laid in

Gold record topped again

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices jumped more than $37 an ounce to a record level in London today following sharp rises during the weekend in the Far East. The U.S. dollar was mixed.

Gold was fixed at $660 U.S. an ounce ($765 Canadian) in London this morning. The previous European trading high was $645 in Zurich on Jan. 3.

Last Friday, gold closed at $622.50 in London and $621.50 In Zurich.

The new surge to record heights followed hectic weekend trading in the Far East. Gold hit an all-time peak of $674.54 in Hong Kong on Saturday, topping its previous high of $673.16 touched a week ago in the British colony.

Silver also rose today to $39 an ounce in London, $1 off its previous record high of $40 reached on Jan. 2 in a worldwide scramble for precious metals in the wake of the Soviet move into Afghanistan. Silver closed at $37.25 Friday.

In London, the British pound rose to $2.2675 from $2.2575 late Friday, despite a national steel strike.

Trident staff march on MPs

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Sixty of the 107 Trident Aircraft employees laid off last week gathered this morning at the downtown Victoria employment centre to register for unemployment insurance.

Carrying placards with slogans criticizing the Conservative government, which last year cut off federal funds for the Sidney firm, they later marched on the campaign headquarters of local Tory MPs Allan McKinnon of Victoria and Don Munro of Esquimalt-Saanich.

He promised he would raise the matter again at this Friday's cabinet meeting.

"I'll let them know of the size and the scale of the problem and we'll go over it again," McKinnon said.

About the employees' demands for Ottawa to reinstate the federal loan guarantees, McKinnon said: "If I could I would do so but I can't."

"I've said all I can say without making foolish promises I can't keep," McKinnon said.

He told the Trident workers: "If you feel I can't represent you adequately it's time to pick somebody else."

The minister held out the possibility of some offset work when the federal fighter aircraft contract is awarded "as soon as we get returned."

This statement brought laughter from the Trident protesters.

"If we aren't in business, who are you going to divide it up among?" asked one employee.

After leaving McKinnon's headquarters the protesters went out Quadra Street to confront Munro, whose riding includes the airport, where the plant is located.

Trident plant electrician Al Hammond said in an interview: "I never voted federally NDP in my life but I will this time. This has made up my mind."

Hammond said he's now lost two jobs in six months because of Prime Minister Joe Clark's austerity measures.

He was laid off at the dockyard last July when the feds cut back funds for the Yukon refit. Luckily, the industrial electrician was hired by Trident a month later. That job lasted until Friday, when the chairman of the board announced the company was going into trusteeship and all but a handful of employees were laid off.

Most of the protesters hoped the trustee — the B.C. Development Corp. — can work something out with the remaining half dozen company executives to revive Trident and rehire those let go.

Said Hammond: "It was a good company. We had the pin pulled out from under us just as we were going into production."

Hammond said the actions of Clark's government had made 110 "instant politicians" of the Trident staff who were going to work against the re-election of local Conservatives Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro.

"It's a change of government we're all hoping for," said Hammond, noting that the Liberals had initiated the federal loan guarantees which enabled Trident to get into production and the NDP had promised support for the firm.

Hammond said if Trident can get going again, it has offers of work from other aircraft companies that could tide it over the present crisis.

"McDonnell-Douglas has promised us 10 years work," he said.

Boeing is also interested in having Trident manufacture parts for it and other firms have inquired.

"But what company will give us work until we've solved our financial problems?"

Hammond said now all defence aircraft in B.C. and Alberta are flown back to Ontario for overhauls and repairs.

"What's the matter with Trident getting some of that work?"

Sam Wylie, toolroom foreman and spokesman for the group, said Trident will probably lose its skilled toolmakers — men who had been gathered from all over to design the machines which make the parts for the company's amphibious Trigull.

"They're in demand," he said.

Gus Salkus, who had worked only eight months

Soviet trade cuts stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is warning that normal trade with the Soviet Union will not resume soon "under even the best of circumstances," as his administration steps up a campaign of reprisals that might lead to a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Strongly defending his handling of the crises in Afghanistan and Iran, Carter said Sunday night that "political considerations and economic profit" must be set aside in responding to the threats they pose.

Earlier, a White House official said Carter "cannot support U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are still in Afghanistan."

The president sent Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher to Europe Sunday to consult with U.S. allies about a possible Olympic boycott and joint military and economic aid to Pakistan, which borders Afghanistan.

Carter tentatively has approved $400 million in U.S. military and economic aid to Pakistan beginning immediately, if Congress consents, the administration said.

All the weapons would be "defensive", and planes would be excluded in deference to India's concern about strengthening Pakistan, its neighbor and longtime antagonist.

The administration's thrust Sunday also included a renewed threat to Iran. Defence Secretary Harold Brown indicated a naval blockade of that country still is being considered to counter its holding of 50 U.S. hostages.

"Specifically, we cannot rule out the option of cutting off Iranian imports by one means or another," he said when asked about a possible blockade.

'No' in PQ referendum might spark violence

MONTREAL (CP) — A vote against sovereignty-association in the Quebec referendum next spring could cause a rebirth of violence in the province, says Jacques-Yvan Morin, Quebec education minister and vice-premier.

"A vote against the Quebec government in the referendum could provoke a rebirth of violence because young people have put all their hopes in the Parti Quebecois," Morin said in an interview with Le Monde last week. He had been in Paris for a private visit.

This was an apparent reference to the terrorist activities of the defunct Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ), which sought to promote Quebec independence through the use of violence for nearly a decade beginning in the early 1960s.

In the referendum expected in May or June, the Quebec government is asking for a mandate to negotiate a sovereignty-association arrangement by which the province would become an independent state but would retain economic links with the rest of Canada.

Morin also said that "a no vote in the referendum would not put an end to the fight for sovereignty."

As for the Canadian federal elections, Morin said he hoped the Liberals led by former prime minister Pierre Trudeau would be re-elected.

Trudeau's positions "are very firm on the constitutional question and this could cause conflict with (Quebec Liberal leader) Claude Ryan," Morin said.

"Quebecers will know better what to expect with Trudeau than with (Prime Minister Joe) Clark whose low-key policies have prevented the voters from forming an opinion on his government."

Hundreds flee two derailments

Hundreds of persons were evacuated from their homes as officials worked to clean up after train derailments that spilled chemicals into a stream in Ohio and set fire to a tanker in Pennsylvania.

About 500 to 700 persons in Arizona ate Sunday dinner in Red Cross shelters after two propane tankers were derailed.

Ohio authorities said about 750 persons were evacuated Sunday after 17 cars of a 68-car Conrail freight train were derailed and one of the cars spilled a highly toxic chemical identified as toluene diisocyanate.

Olympic move 'if IOC agrees'

Times News Services

Prime Minister Joe Clark said today Canada will consider alternate sites for the 1980 Olympics only if the International Olympic Committee (IOC) believes Moscow is unsuitable.

"If they — the IOC — are looking elsewhere for a site, we are prepared to look at Montreal," Clark told a caller on a Hamilton radio station open-line show.

A White House official Sunday said President Carter "cannot support U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are still in Afghanistan."

Ruled out by the Carter administration, it was learned, is arranging alternative Olympic games in a Western city, such as Montreal or Munich.

The president sent Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher to Europe Sunday to consult with U.S. allies about a possible Olympic boycott.

But Lord Killanin, IOC president, said in Ireland Sunday that there was no possibility of switching the Games from Moscow.

In an interview in the Sunday Press, Killanin said the games would go ahead as planned and a switch to Munich, Montreal or anywhere else was "physically impossible."

"When the IOC gave the games to Moscow, the American Olympic Committee was strongly in support," Killanin said. "We do not go back on our word."

Clark said Canada would likely participate in the Games if the IOC decided Moscow should remain the site despite the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"I don't want to boycott the Games. I want Canada to participate."

Clark had announced Friday that, along with a number of sanctions against the Soviet Union, Canada would take a leading role in discussions with other nations to have the Games withdrawn from Moscow.

In the first Soviet response to calls for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics, a top official of the games said such attempts have failed in the past and a newspaper Sunday accused President Carter of using sports for "political blackmail."

But this weekend, Vladimir Popov, first deputy chairman of the 1980 Olympic Organizing Committee, said there are some who hope to undermine this summer's games.

"They do not make honest, businesslike critical remarks but are attempting to use the present situation in the world for imposing the idea of boycotting the Moscow games," he said in an article in the newspaper Izvestia.

Smugglers digging in

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli private investigators are mounting a search in the Sinai Desert for an improbable buried treasure — 140 Mercedes Benz cars believed stolen in Israel and waiting to be dug up and smuggled into Egypt.

The border between Israel and Egypt, constantly shifting as Israel withdraws from the Sinai, has become a paradise for Israeli and Arab smugglers trafficking in everything from cars to towels.

Police sources say the traffic is huge, but figures are hard to come by. One indicator comes from Shmuel Flatto-Sharon, a member of Israel's parliament who contends that about 140 West German Mercedes Benzes are buried in the Sinai sands on the Israeli side of the lines, waiting to be dug up and sold when the area is turned back to Egypt.

Flatto-Sharon has started a group called the Mercedes Victims, which is renting a helicopter and four Jeeps to hunt for the buried cars around the dunes near El Arish, the only major town in Sinai. The hunt is set to begin Tuesday. Police and Israeli soldiers have already dug up 32 vehicles in the area.

Flatto-Sharon's secretary, Zvi Vilder, says the thieves, both Arabs and Israelis, drive the cars to Gaza with fake Gaza registration plates. There they sell them to local Bedouin Arabs familiar with the pathless sands of the area, who take them off for burial.

Some of the cars have already made their way to Egypt, and one Israeli journalist reported riding in a Cairo taxi that had the Hebrew words — "Onward Paratroopers" — still stenciled on its door.

The wealthy Flatto-Sharon has a personal stake in the problem. His own Mercedes, an $86,000 SL-450, complete with television, radio-telephone and bar, disappeared several months ago. It is believed to have made the familiar route from Tel Aviv to the Sinai burial grounds.

The smuggling has been one of the topics discussed by the joint Israeli-Egyptian military committee on Sinai. Committee members flying over the area recently sighted the stolen vehicle of an Israeli brigadier-general.

Israeli soldiers recently stopped an Arab truck driver on his way to Gaza. It turned out the truck was stolen, and loaded on the back was a Mercedes taxi — also stolen.

NEW FUEL SAVER is a redesigned steel-belted radial tire being tested at Avon Tyres plant in Wiltshire, England. A number of design changes could save the average motorist 90 litres of fuel each year. Extensive tests on the Turbosteel Mk 2 also show an improvement on wet surfaces. The tires are used on Rolls-Royce and British Leyland vehicles as standard equipment.

TD bank predicts inflation increase

TORONTO (CP) — Higher wages and increased crude oil prices will mean a slight increase in inflation this year, the Toronto Dominion bank forecasts.

The winter edition of the bank's quarterly Canada's Business Climate expects an average increase of 9.8 per cent in the consumer price index, compared with 9.1 per cent in 1979.

The bank says the gross national product — the value of all goods and services in the country — will increase about one per cent this year, compared with 2.7 per cent in 1979.

Only business investment is expected to be a significant source of growth. The bank says it shoud rise by six per cent in real terms.

Unemployment is expected to rise to 8.3 per cent from 7.5 per cent in 1979.

After-tax incomes should rise by 10.8 per cent, but personal savings will decline.

The growth of the labor force will drop marginally to 2.8 per cent from three per cent, but job creation will decline to about two per cent from four per cent in 1979.

The bank expects the Canadian dollar to remain weak in the first half of the year, but improve to about 88 cents U.S. in the second half, reflecting favorable energy developments and declining U.S. interest rates.

Kodak to spend 40% more

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Eastman Kodak Co. plans to spend $870 million this year — about 40 per cent more than 1979 — for plant additions, other building and production improvements, says the chairman of the world's largest film producer.

The company will spend $660 million — $482 million in the United States and Canada — in the photographic division, and another $210 million in the Eastman Chemicals Division, he said.

Some of the increase is attributable to world-wide inflation, and more money is allocated within the photographic unit for expanded recovery of silver from used film, Fallon said.

Kodak also announced it is raising film prices by as much as 75 per cent on Jan. 25 because of soaring silver prices.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rolled up a broad gain today in a busy session marked by strength in oil issues.

Aided by buying on the part of investing institutions, the Dow Jones industrial average climbed almost 30 points last week in the busiest trading week ever at the NYSE. Some of that activity evidently persisted Monday.

In the economic news, there were reports that threatened cutbacks in sales of oil by Iran posed a diminishing threat to the world oil-supply outlook.

Among actively traded oil stocks, Texaco was up 1½ to $30½; Exxon gained ⅝ to $53; Standard Oil of Indiana 1 to $77¾, and Phillips Petroleum ½ to $49¼. Phillips raised its quarterly dividend from 35 to 45 cents a share.

Merrill Lynch rose ⅜ to $22. The shares of the largest U.S. securities and brokerage firm benefited from the recent surge in market activity.

London

The Financial Times index was up 13.1 to 448.3.

Life may begin at 40 for some folks — but for Martha Anna Nichols it began at 80. That's when she started jogging. Now, at 83, the Atlantic City, N.J., grandmother has added motorcycles, camping, a piano and a bit of old time religion to her repertory of life. She still dons her yellow sweatsuit and white sneakers for her daily mile-and-a-half run, but she admits her plunge into things spiritual was a bit scary. Her grandson introduced her to a church, and, says she, "I knew what they were teaching was true, but it took a while to be baptized. I'm scared of water you know — nearly drowned in the ocean twice." And that just could signal scuba diving lessons.

Caroline

A Paris court Thursday ordered the French magazine Photo to pay Princess Caroline of Monaco $20,000 damages for publishing topless pictures of her without permission. The court dismissed a charge that photographers had invaded her privacy in taking the pictures, but said the magazine had violated her exclusive rights concerning the use of her image.

The British mother who caused controversy nearly 30 years ago by giving her infant son to former Hollywood sex symbol Jane Russell, was found murdered in her gutted London apartment. Authorities said they believe Florence Kavanagh, 53, who lived alone, was strangled and her apartment in the south London district of Clapham set on fire to hide the slaying. She was last seen leaving a Clapham tavern with a man.

King Carl Gustav of Sweden will visit Rhode Island in August to watch the Swedish 12-metre yacht Sverige compete with three other entries in preliminary America's Cup races.

President Josip Broz Tito met with Yugoslavia's second-ranking political leader, the state news agency Tanjug reported, apparently to show that he is still well and active. The 87-year-old Tito is reported suffering from problems with blood vessels in his legs. Tito has been secluded in a Slovenian mountain residence where he met with a U.S. heart and circulatory specialist, Dr. Michael deBakey, and Soviet cardiovascular specialist Dr. Marat Knyazhev.

Dear Abby:

May I comment on your confidential to "should I give in?". You responded with this sad refrain:

"When I met him, I liked him.
When I liked him, I loved him.
When I loved him, I let him.
When I let him, I lost him." — (Author Unknown)

That might have been true once, Abby, but not today.

I know many girls (now women) who "held out," and were left out. I am a living example — and a very bitter one. I believed that holding out was the way to get a man, but I lost a number of good men to other women who met their needs for a "total relationship" (sex). Now these women are happily married and are righteous pillars of our community, while I spend nights and weekends alone. Now I'm too scared to try a sexual relationship; all I can do is fantasize about one. (I only wish I had some real memories.)

I know this has no chance of being printed since you need to protect your point of view. Why do you perpetrate such nonsense?

Dear Held Out:

"Letting" a man is vastly different from being a party to a mature love relationship — one in which each gives equally. To "let" someone is to allow yourself to be used.

Have no regrets for not "letting" yourself be used. Regret only having passed up a mature love relationship playing instead that childish game of holding out, thinking that was the way to get a man.

I don't know your age, but you are never too old for a sexual relationship if you want one.

Dear Abby:

I am part of a triangle. All three of us are in our 60s.

I have been in love with this man for nearly 30 years. He loves me, but his wife will not give him a divorce — or at least that is what I have been told all these years.

I have no social life, and very little family life because I've wanted to be available when my sweetheart found an hour for me.

Nobody talked me into anything. I made this choice a long time ago, and I wasn't a child then.

Perhaps I'm in a sentimental mood tonight (he's on his way to see me at this very moment), I am playing "our records" on the stereo, the wine is chilling, and the old excitement is still there.

Half a Loaf

Dear Half:

It's your life, and I'm glad you're happy. Not everyone can make a banquet out of somebody else's crumbs.

But man is the deadliest killer of them all

It is no secret to knowledgeable up-Islanders that our cougar population, if you will excuse a villainous pun, is growing by leaps and bounds. Thereby hang several tales, and as a connoisseur of cougar stories, I propose joyfully to pass them on to you.

First, there was the startling experience of a woman who lives a few properties down the highway. Her house is reached by a winding drive, which ends at the edge of the woods.

Late one recent evening, our subject tooled her car up the drive, swung it around the corner of her carport, and from the side of her eye, caught a flicker of movement in the shadows.

As the car completed its half-circle, its headlights swept away the gloom. The lady clamped a foot on the brake and sat staring, not quite believing what she saw.

This was a large cougar, which sat saucy as you please in the angle between house and carport, gazing at the homeowner with a calm gooseberry eye.

At this point, I interrupted with a question. "Were you scared?" I asked.

"Oh, no," she answered. "After all, I was perfectly safe in my car. We sat looking at each other for a while, then the cougar turned and disappeared in the woods."

The only precautionary action this calm lady has taken is to keep her dogs close. When a cougar takes to haunting human habitations, it is almost invariably lured by the presence of dogs and cats, which it proceeds in methodical fashion to vacuum up.

But the cougar's preferred diet is deer meat, which leads us into my second account. This bears on another woman, also in a car, upon whose vision burst an astounding sight.

She was driving down the highway in broad daylight when, approximately level with our house, a doe deer came bouncing out of one of the cross-road lots. While the driver was slowing to digest this spectacle, a cougar followed in hot pursuit. Deer and cougar ran down the road for about 50 yards, then the deer veered off into a spruce-grown lot above the beach, and the pair was lost to sight.

Such a chase is by no means typical cougar behavior. Usually if puss misses her initial charge, the intended prey goes free. But not at all typical, either, was the experience that befell my friend Harry while he was deer hunting with a friend late-on in the season.

Harry is a matter-of-fact, almost phlegmatic man with a habit of under-statement, who takes it as all in the day's work that he should augment his family's meat supply with his rifle in season.

How'd you make out last trip?" I asked Harry when he stopped by for coffee.

"Not too bad," he said. "Got a nice little two-spike buck, and a young cougar."

"What did you do with the cat?" I asked.

"Ate it," Harry said. "I never tasted better meat." He paused, then added dryly, "For a while there, it was a case of who was going to eat who."

"You don't mean a cougar jumped you?" I asked.

"I sure do," Harry said, "I've been hunting all my life and never dreamed of anything like that happening. Certainly not to me!"

The attack occurred only a few yards from the camp where Harry worked, close to a road which he travelled unarmed and on foot each day.

Harry and a friend had set out after deer when they were flagged down by a driver coming from the opposite direction.

Harry and his friend saw no sign of the cat. They separated, spreading out to enfilade the road. Behind him, in heavy cover, Harry heard a minor rustle. At the same moment, his partner winged an urgent yell at him.

"Harry! Look out!"

Harry swivelled around to see a cougar soar out of a brushy trough straight at him.

He threw up his rifle, a re-stocked military .303-calibre, and fired. The cougar plowed earth almost at his feet.

It was a young beast . . . one of a pair, the hunters deduced, since they heard the plaintive calling of another cat nearby. Chased off by its mother, no doubt, and too green to have learned that man is the deadliest killer of them all!

HILARY GROOS doesn't complain about gas prices in her native Victoria — and since eggs cost nearly $1 for a half dozen where she has been living, it isn't likely food costs here worry her too much, either. For Hilary's story and her fascinating world perspective, see Elizabeth Forbes' column today on page 22.

Body English spoken here

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — If you want to prove your body can speak just as convincingly as your voice, Ken Cooper has a test for you.

"Just for fun," he says, "go home and approach your wife with a wide smile and your arms outstretched, and scream into her face in an angry voice, 'I love you!'"

Cooper is a specialist in nonverbal communication, the language of the body. He analyzes how people convey their true feelings by the way they pose themselves — or try to cover up their true feelings the same way. Virtually everyone communicates in body language, Cooper said in an interview.

"Even the Ayatollah Khomeini is amazing in the type of things he does," Cooper said. "I call him the Persian Darth Vader, the epitome of all the evil guys who have ever lived.

"On his television interviews, he didn't even acknowledge that the interviewer was there. He had no direct eye contact. He has very sinister-looking eyebrows. He whispers, like Marlon Brando, which is very commanding. If you and I whispered like that, we'd bore everybody to death."

Cooper has written a book titled "Nonverbal Communication for Business Success" in which he applies his techniques to the business world. But body language can be used in any situation.

To help interpret what others are saying, Cooper developed a five-point body survey. It takes into account the position of someone's head, hands, legs, general posture and what Cooper defines as "the center," a point right at the breastbone.

Cooper said the concept of the centre indicates most vividly how people feel about themselves. A chest thrust out indicates aggression, he says, while a slouch suggests diffidence. A wide-open centre, with hands spread apart, is a much more inviting attitude than a negative, closed-off approach.

But interpreting nonverbal communication isn't as easy as going down a checklist and putting the pieces together. Cooper cautions against making broad generalizations based on one particular trait. He also says body language should be used to make matters more open, not to hide the truth.

"Controlling your body language or changing it to something you are not is almost impossible. I can do it, but I'm a professional. Most of us are not good enough actors to do it.

"My point is not to control your own body language, but to help you read others. When I lecture, I like to call on people before they raise their hands. I'll point to them and say, 'Do you have a question?' They'll be halfway through before they realize they didn't volunteer."

Cooper was trained as an engineer, but he got out of school during what he calls "the great engineering depression of the 1960s" and became a salesman for IBM. He heard a talk on body language, began to study it more fully, then decided to lecture full time.

Nonverbal communication affects all areas of life — business, the dating game, especially politics. Cooper has photographs of the 1976 debates between Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford, showing a smiling Carter using open hand gestures while a no-nonsense Ford is gripping the podium with white-knuckled hands.

First impressions are important, Cooper said, and the right body language can help.

"If I walk into your office, I'll shake your hand, then step back and break the contact. I'll sit down, put my briefcase on the floor and adjust my suit while you can give me the once-over without my looking.

"Giving you the chance to check the press of my pants or the shine of my shoes at the beginning means I have a better chance of getting you to listen to what I say later on. This is especially important for women going into the office of a man."

Woodpecker inspires brain studies

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

The frontiers of science never cease to be amazing. Thousands of dedicated scientists devote their lives to finding barely perceptible fragments of information in the hope that these will furnish leads to better health and the longevity of mankind.

A fascinating scientific study was performed by Dr. Philip May, at the University of California School of Medicine. He and his colleagues found that the head motion of a drilling woodpecker may lead to better ways of protecting the human brain from injury.

Using high-speed films and computer analysis, the woodpeckers' neck and head were studied while they were drilling into trees. The secret of the birds' immunity to brain damage, despite repeated sharp blows with their heads, may have been discovered.

It seems that the straight-hitting path of the head and the absence of rotation of the neck diminishes the dangers of the sudden impact caused by blows to the brain.

It is felt that this information can be translated into methods of saving the lives of boxers and players of contact sports. It is suggested that helmets worn for impact protection should be thick and light, with a two-layer, form-fitting inner padding. An inner spongy layer would absorb the energy of impact and a harder outer layer would distribute the impact force evenly.

Dr. May says, "More than just the helmet protecting the head is necessary to protect against brain impact damage. Restraints that minimize rotary movements and whiplash movements are also necessary. A person facing an imminent impact injury should tighten the neck muscles and hold the neck flexed in a chin-down position, to minimize possible brain damage."

It is to be hoped that some of the severe damage in boxing, football and other contact sports will eventually be minimized by the scientific contribution of the adorable woodpecker.

Melted paraffin is another way of bringing heat and comfort to people suffering with some forms of arthritis. Hot compresses, heat lamps, hot baths and diathermy also seem to relieve the spasm of pain in the muscles and the joints.

It must be remembered that the melted paraffin can cause severe burns, unless used properly.

None of these modalities should be used without specific instructions.
